Crops Good—Miss Lipe Will Teach—Personal and Other Items Around Enochville.

If you travel over the States from the Atlantic to the Pacific you will never find a more prosperous and hospitable people than those in this "little rich o' land" in South Western Rowan. The people are contented and happy—the land is productive, easy to cultivate and subject to the highest improvement.

The wheat crop, at the time of this scribbling, promises to surpass that of almost any previous year. The farms show the most careful attention. The stand of corn is almost perfect; the cool nights have somewhat retarded the growth of cotton but the fine rains of last week will lift it out of the dirt.

Mr. John Lipe, the efficient merchant, is in Lexington putting up the machinery of a new roller mill.

Miss Emma Lipe, the accomplished daughter of Mr. Lipe, will, in all probability, be the assistant of Prof. Miller in conducting Enochville High School next session, Prof. Miller (son of Mr. H G Miller, well known in Cabarrus) is a young man who has the interest of his profession at heart and the coming session of the school bids fair to be, in every way, a success.

Rev. C B Miller and family, of Concord, are expected here today to spend some time with Enochville's beloved pastor, Rev. Stickley, and his highly cultivated wife.

Rev. and Mrs. Stickley and their nephew, Carlisle, will, deo volente, start for the Valley of Virginia next Monday, the 24th, to spend their vacation with relatives and "old acquaintances."

The Enochville Lutheran congregation—a congregation that ever "work together for good" has had the parsonage painted.

In "viewing this landscape o'er" we must make especial mention of the farms of Messrs Ephraim Overcash and David Wright. There is not a foot on either farm under cultivation that is not as clean and in as pretty fix as any chosen garden spot. The growing crops are in evidence of what industry, care and attention will do.

Strawberry pie is no rarity here now. Everybody has a bed of the luscious berries in the garden and the adaptability of the soil gives a yield fine in flavor and magnificent in size.

Bee culture is a success. We have even more bees and a greater amount of beautiful honey here than any where else.

Mr. Ephraim Overcash has the nicest, most complete and well arranged poultry house we have ever seen.

C J Deal and Uncle Aaron Yost are the merchants. Mr. Yost is an old landmark, having passed his 79th mile post in life, as we reckon it.

Mr. Dan Fisher is greatly interested in crayon drawing and we had the pleasure of inspecting some portraits just finished. One of Rev. W A Lutz is especially fine, equal if not surpassing any northern work we have seen. Let us STOP.

A MEMORIAL SERVICE.

The Dead Showman's Grave Decorated With Flowers by Visiting Showmen—An Impressive Ceremony.

In the Presbyterian cemetery in this city is the grave of a Scotchman, and the slab over the grave bears the following inscription:

"George Yeaman, Equestrian, born in Edinburgh, Scotland, January 13th, 1801, and departed this life November 7th, 1827."

Yeaman is said to have been one of the finest bare-back riders known to the profession and while giving a performance here in the year 1827, met with an accident that caused instant death. He was buried with Masonic honors.

Ytaman was young in years and was making his first tour of the South with John Robinson's great country circus.

It has been the custom of some members of every circus that has visited this city to go to that lonely grave and leave flowers or inscribe their names upon the slab, but none have ever paid so fitting a tribute to their fallen comrade as the members of Cooper & Co's circus while in our city Sunday afternoon.

The members of the show, led by the splendid band, assembled at the St. Cloud hotel Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock and gathered up the flowers that had been sent them by the citizens, formed in line and marched to the cemetery, while the band played a funeral march, "The Soldier's Last Letter." A large body of citizens joined them and went to the cemetery. Arriving at the grave, Mr. J R W Hennessey, the manager of the circus, made an impressive talk and offered up a touching prayer in behalf of the fallen and the living members of the profession, asking for Divine guidance and strength. At the conclusion of his prayer, while the band played "Nearer My God to Thee," the grave was then profusely decorated with the choicest flowers the city affords, for which Mr. Hennessey and the entire company thanked the citizens. After the ceremony the large crowd was dispersed, but not until after many tears had been shed.

"I," in the Statesville Landmark, says some very complimentary things of Mr. B B Miller's school work at Troutman for the term just closed. We are more than pleased to hear of his success in the work, and hope that he will resume it in the fall. Top of the morning to our young friend, Miller!
