MOTION RECORDED.

Every true North Carolinian should constitute himself a committee of one to redeem North Carolina from the clutches of incompetence, and in some instances, disgraceful rule. Efforts should be directed, first, towards legislative and county officers next year, and second, towards the State officers thereafter.—Winston Sentinel.

[True, but it looks like that great money question which so few of us are able to treat intelligently, is to be constantly thrown in, and our present calamities are to be laid at the door of our own political family. There is a disposition over the State among the professors of Democracy to be aiming half their blows at their own ranks. It will be a puny contest with us if this financial question is to be forever up as a source of irritation. Its discussion might be well enough by those who can give light on it rather than to vent ignoble, distracting imputations against those who can't see just as they are expected to. Let us stop this folly and second the Sentinel's motion.]

BETTER THAN LYNCHING.

Brodie's horrible cries of terror at the verge of eternity on Tuesday and his frantic prayers for forgiveness and help carry sufficient terror with them. It is doubtful if lynching can be more impressive. Poor Miss Gattlett must suffer on all through life the terrible humiliation, but not more so than if Brodie had been lynched. The fact that Dock Black was hanged in Greene county on the same day for the same kind of crime shows that such wretches have no chance of life by a North Carolina jury, but that citizens prefer to be orderly in attempting to correct disorder. The next good thing to do would be to create a sentiment among the colored people strongly against the terrible evil as several important bodies have done. With an influential crusade against this most detestable of crimes and the prompt and orderly execution of its perpetrators we can reasonably hope that the wave of crime will pass away.

There is a big revival in progress among the colored denizens around Mountville, S. C., and they are so busy "burying Satan" that they haven't time to pick cotton. They would rather bury the devil any day than pick cotton.—Wilmington Star.

Cascarets stimulate liver, kidney, and bowels. Never sicken, weaken or gripe. 10c.

JUST NOISE.

The New York Sun prints a list of the imprecations and jibes hurled at the umpire during one game of baseball in that vicinity recently. A half-column is taken up by the list and probably some of the best or worst things escaped the recorder. The umpire was called a yellow dog, robber, thief, crook, liar, murderer, sheep stealer and perjurer, each epithet emphasized by some of the worst forms of profanity known to the rooster. This was all in addition to the noisy work of the coaches, and is probably a fair sample of what is heard on many grounds.

The promoters of the national game probably do not realize how offensive this is to decent people, who go to see good ball and not to hear the umpire abused, or to listen to a storm of coarse witticisms from the coaches. Nine-tenths of the stuff roared out by the latter is as much out of place as a saw mill would be in a game of whist. Once in a year or two a coacher comes along who gets off something worth a laugh, and perhaps once in a game he really helps the players between bases by his advice; but on the whole it is sorry stuff he sells and about as agreeable to listen to as a steam siren in a fog. Moreover it makes the game difficult to follow, when a fellow on the foul line is allowed to bellow out a mass of verbal nothing. The game has degenerated sadly when noise can be supposed to pass for playing and be counted as an attraction.—Asheville Citizen.

The Wilsons have both made strong clear statements and have shown good cause why they should not be removed by the governor from the railroad commission. Now it remains to be seen whether the governor will persist in removing them. The entire probability is that he will, for he has shown quite an unenviable spirit and with Marion Butler close at his side telling him how treacherous everybody is, there is little doubt that the Governor will do his worst.

The Philadelphia Times is not very far wrong when it says that "the calendar and customs notwithstanding, the New Year begins not in January, but in September. In September, school starts, the theatres open, libraries are once more peopled with returned readers; art breaks from its chrysalis; music poises its wings for a new flight; the churches apply themselves with renewed vigor to the work of saving souls;" and so forth and so forth, and so on. It is even so. And down here merchants burnish up their stores, and cotton-buyers hold their ears to the ground for the sound of the rattle of the first cotton wagon. People of all occupations prick up their ears with the advent of September, and it is in a large sense the beginning of a new year.—Charlotte Observer.

There are lots of cranks in Russia. The latest development is a religious sect which teaches that the soul belongs to God and the body to the devil. Therefore they take care of the soul and let the body take care of itself and refuse to wash, comb their hair, change their garments or anything of that kind. They do not fall, however, to stuff some food into it and hunt a warm corner when the mercury drops.—Wilmington Star.

No More Constables.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 2.—When reporters gathered in his office today, on their daily rounds, Governor Ellerbe, without preface, announced in a dozen words that on October 1st he would remove the State constables from the towns in the State. It is supposed the cost of the constables is the reason for this action. He gives no other reason. The towns will be expected to enforce the dispensary law.

A few constables will be employed in remote rural districts. Governor Ellerbe said he made the announcement now so that the constables could look out for other jobs.
