Yes, We're That Way.

That certainly is a nice and just compliment that the Charlotte Observer pays our boys, in regard to the calling off of the game Wednesday evening. Here is what it says:

"Concord did a clever thing Wednesday in calling the game a draw, when she could by reason of Charlotte's default in not having a substitute player, have claimed the game. It was a white act. All honor to the Cabarrus boys!"

We thank them for that, and assure them that it is appreciated. We want games, but we also want to treat our visitors justly. It is better to lose rightly than to gain unfairly.

A Burglary at Albemarle.

In the Shankle correspondence it is noted that there are three cases for the coming term of court at Albemarle, which might result in taking of life as the sentence. Another has since been added. Some person entered the residence of Mr. David Seago. While nothing has been missed, still the negro, Jones Parsons, will be tried for his life, as persons were sleeping in the house, which makes the offence capital.

Mrs. Ross Dead.

The wife of Mr. J. A. C. Ross, who lives near the depot, died Wednesday night, having had fever. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benton Barnhardt. Mr. and Mrs. Ross had been married only about a year. The remains were interred today (Thursday.)

An Unfortunate Accident.

A very sad accident happened at Greensboro just as the parade was starting Wednesday. The bronze bird representing the American eagle, which was placed high on the Cleopatra bronze float, was struck by a telegraph wire and knocked down on the head of Miss Ruth Porter, one of the occupants of the float, who was painfully, though not seriously, injured. It was necessary, however, that she should be taken from the float and carried home. This accident to Miss Porter brings to mind the fact that her brother had his leg broken in two places a few weeks ago by falling under the wheels of a hook and ladder truck.—Charlotte Observer.

NO WEAR AND TEAR!

Is the laundry hard on your goods? Some are. Examine your goods as carefully when you send them to us as when you receive them back again and you will find that we sew up many a rip, mend many a button hole, put new neck bands on shirts not too badly worn (when requested), and in many ways try to prolong the use of your linen. One trial is not a test. Often damage has been done in previous laundering and we get the blame. Give us your steady patronage and we will guarantee your linen to last longer than when done at many other laundries.
