Debate at the Concord Institute.

On Friday night Washington's birthday exercises were held at the Concord Institute. An essay on the life of the first president was read by Claudius Smith. A debate was given on the question, "Resolved, That Washington deserves more honor than Admiral Dewey." The debaters on the affirmative were Rev. Jas. H. Lippard, Pearl Schubert, and Miss Estelle Blackwelder; negative, Miss Conie Pounds, W. B. Morgan, and Miss Addie Barrier. The question was hotly contested and the judges rendered their verdict in favor of the negative side. A few invited friends were present.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Was Celebrated By the Graded Schools Friday Afternoon—A Good Crowd Present.

If you had been at the Central school building Friday afternoon you would have thought that there was no lack of children in the schools in spite of the vaccination order. The Forest Hill and Cannonville schools were present and every nook and corner of the four large rooms were crowded with children or visitors. The occasion was the celebration of Washington's birthday.

The rooms were appropriately decorated and an excellent program of essays, recitations, and songs was rendered by the schools.

Many visitors were present and all agreed that the exercises were the best yet given by the schools.

A beautiful picture of Washington was presented to the schools by the ladies of the "Daughters of the Revolution" aided by Mr. B. F. Mebane of this State.

The ninth grade of the graded schools are now looking forward with interest to commencement, at which time twelve or fifteen of their number will complete the prescribed course of study and receive their diplomas.

Superintendent Coler extended an urgent invitation to all parents to visit the schools and hear the regular work.

It's No Wonder He Regretted It.

The Monroe Journal gives the following strange occurrence:

"One day last week while Mr. D. D. Stinson of Indian Trail was repairing a wagon wheel a piece of wood flew up and struck him in the mouth, knocking out his most highly prized tooth. Perhaps from an intrinsic point of view the tooth was not worth more than others, but it is from the standpoint of sentiment that Mr. Stinson so much regrets his misfortune. It was during the war. Mr. Stinson was a prisoner at Point Lookout, eighteen months. The tooth was decaying and dentists were not to be had. The emergencies of the war gave rise to many different expedients. Mr. Stinson proved himself equal to the occasion. He secured an awl and file and a little piece of pewter. With these instruments, this material and a looking glass, with his own hands, Mr. Stinson bored and filled the tooth and for thirty-six years it had been doing valuable service in the mastication of food. Mr. Stinson has a right to regret his untimely accident."

Birmingham Has a Fire.

A Birmingham dispatch of the 23rd says:

The explosion of a gasoline stove in the basement of the Metropolitan Hotel, on Twentieth street and Morris avenue, this afternoon, was followed by a fire which burned that building and the Hewlitt block adjoining, causing a loss of about $160,000. The insurance amounts to about three-fourths of the loss.

A Party in Honor of Miss Juliette Johnson.

The younger society set of Concord was entertained in the most delightful style at a patriotic reception given by Mrs. J. D. Hatchett in honor of her niece, Miss Juliette Johnson, at her home, which was tastefully decorated in the national colors and flags. The fair guests and escorts began arriving at 8 o'clock and in a short while a large bevy of charming young people graced the halls and parlors. Upon the arrival of all the guests the sitting room doors were thrown open and the young gentlemen ushered into a hat trimming bee to try their skill at hat trimming and fashion one for the fair one whom fate destined him to take into supper, which was determined by the matching of patriotic quotations on the souvenirs, also little cards bearing the date and a little hatchet which was very suggestive of the evening of the 22nd. A prize awarded for the most tasteful trimmed hat was carried off with great honors by Mr. Arcey Brown, while with well becoming dignity Mr. Ernest Correll bore off the booty. After this mode of entertainment and several hours of bright repartee the participants were invited into the dining room by the guest of honor and the most delicious and tempting viands were served. After the dispensation of these a lively cake walk was indulged in, much to the amusement of every one. Just before the wee sma' hours of the night the guests reluctantly departed, carrying with them a remembrance of one of the most delightful evenings of the season. ONE PRESENT.

A Fine Breed of Chickens.

Hoyle, who is very much interested in the poultry business has received from Ohio four of the silver spangled Hamburg chickens, which are said to be the very best of layers and in chicken grading they are graded above 90.
