JUDGE CLARK A JUROR WHOSE MIND IS MADE UP.

We have waded through the exhaustive article of Mr. Henry A Page, of Aberdeen, found in the Sunday's Charlotte Observer. It seems to us full of force. It contains about 4500 words, but barring a little sarcasm in one small part, it seems, fraught with clean cut logic and palpable facts.

Mr. Page, without hope of changing the trend that is carrying Judge Walter Clark into the high office of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, protests that he has manifested a prejudice against corporations, railroads especially, that does not promise even justice from him when a corporation and an individual are involved.

He claims that no man will be allowed on a jury whose mind is made up in a case so clearly as that of Judge Clark against corporations.

Mr. Page's argument in this seems absolutely resistless.

Then, too, Mr. Page recites a number of instances in which there is not a semblance of justice to corporations in the verdict of juries.

He claims, and we fully agree with him in this matter, that our people have been prejudiced against corporations till great sums can be gotten from them where the fault lies largely, if not entirely, with the plaintiff.

We pause to say right here that if farmers were sued and such sums collected out of them, for little accidents from fellow laborers, or from a runaway horse that was known not to be trustworthy, as are collected from corporations, it would drive them out of ever employing a laborer; for one single little accident would take from the ordinary farmer his farm and all thereon. Nor will it take many years till the contagion will reach every class if fostered.

That Judge Clark has been instrumental in bringing about this condition we cannot doubt and we would be glad to vote for some one else for the high office, for which we always thought that only the few of our able lawyers who can rise above prejudice could fill with the effect to command due respect for that last and final tribunal which is to apply just laws in golden scales. For Judge Clark's great learning we respect him, for his progressive ability we admire him and for his late work of editing the regimental histories of North Carolina troops we love him truly, but from what we have learned of him we wish his great talents were applied in a field where this weakness of ambitious prejudice would be less liable to do evil.

When shall we meet again, meet ne'er to sever from street lights?

The Philadelphia Inquirer, inquires, Does a man own his own brains? Why certainly he does if he has any.

January 28th might be set down by almanac makers as notable for spots in the United States Senate. Lodge and Teller, Spooner and Tillman and Teller Beveridge take forensing sparring bouts. Blows seemed imminent at times but nothing was wounded but Senatorial dignity.

Dispatches of the 28th from London with regard to a peace basis between Great Britain and the Transvaal was supposed to mean the end but now does not promise anything much. Holland would gladly render service as a peacemaker but is powerless to accomplish much. Between a proud, strong nation and a strong headed weak nation peace is hard to arrive at.

The January number of the Confederate Veteran quotes an attacks on the Daughters of the Confederacy by a northern preacher who came south. He looks upon their keeping afresh in the minds of the generations the unparalleled sacrifices and the unequalled heroism of southern soldiers as a species of treason equal to the utmost characters in the roll of anarchists. The attack was duly rebuked by a series of strong resolutions by the N. B Forest Camp U. C. V. But the radicals are not all on one side for at the Charleston reunion we wanted to hold our ears shut at the bitter speech of a Southerner. Why can't some men see and admire the noble incentives of men at this distant day and land the chivalric virtues without reference to the particular side on which one was arrayed, since the contest was settled by the abatement of war which was entered upon as a last resort by both contending parties

Kodol

Digests what you Eat

It contains exactly the same elements as Nature's digestive fluids and can't help but produce the same results.—David Taylor, Blind Ridge, Pa., writes: "I have been afflicted for a number of years with dyspepsia and have tried various remedies with no good results but was cured by one bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE.
