SENATOR PRITCHARD AND THE POLL TAX.

Senator Pritchard, while denying that the Republican party will pay the poll tax for its delinquents so as to save them all for election time, takes occasion to send along an intimation that the Democrats, where in control, will prevail on the County Commissioners to release them on condition that they vote the Democratic ticket—a thing absurd on the face of it—and approached most nearly by the Republicans in the revenue department, of which they have long been in control. Then Mr. Pritchard gives a loud whine that the poll tax has to be paid by the first of May in order to vote. He would have the time extended to October when the candidates have all been nominated and would, of course, be tempted to pay the poll tax to get the vote of the delinquent.

Why don't the Senator come out and say boldly that he wants to throw open the door for corruption as widely as possible?

The extension to October would be just the thing for the unpatriotic to hang themselves, every other year, on the shoulders of the candidates and thereby quench every bit of latent patriotic warmth in themselves while the Popes could pass around among Federal office holders for "voluntary" contributions and fry enough fat out of them to aid in getting every voter in the Republican ranks greased through.

It seems strange that a man as high in official distinction as Senator Pritchard should boldly advocate a measure so fraught with corrupting probabilities as the extension to October of the time for paying the poll tax. Better, ten thousand times, wipe out the poll tax provision.

THE AUGUSTA, GA., COTTON MILL AFFAIR.

The strike now on at the Augusta (Georgia) cotton mills, which may involve a number of other mills in that State and South Carolina, did not result from any dissatisfaction on the part of the operatives of these mills, but in obedience to "an order" from labor agitators at Fall River, Massachusetts.

The Post has warned Southern people against these New England agitators and meddlers, who are not interested in the welfare of our people but wish to destroy advantages which our operatives have in the New England mills. We regret to see, and our operatives will live to regret, that these emissaries—real enemies—have been permitted to get control in this season.—Morning Post.

One of the grandest of human achievements is to learn to know one's own true friends and be proud against alienation from designing or wanton disturbers.

Whether the Charleston Exposition pays or not and whether any great trade or industrial development grows out of it or not, it has unquestionably been a success from a matrimonial point of view. The idea of a Charleston bridal tour seems to have fanned love's flames into a sort of marrying conflagration.

A Manila dispatch of the 8th is going the rounds to the effect that Gen. Jacob H Smith gave orders to Major Waller to kill and burn on the Island of Samar. Being asked to define the Gen. is represented as saying "Every thing over ten years" and that the more he killed and burned the better and that he (Gen. Smith) would have it made a howling wilderness. This comes up in the course of a court martial for executions without trial. The thing is altogether too absurd to believe, that we had a general so savage and reckless.

The News and Observer, of Raleigh, is out in a special edition of 40 pages. It is like a book to read with different towns and sections of the State for chapters. The pictures form a very attractive part of the issue and are very entertaining. Like the special edition of the Charlotte News it is for the Charleston exposition and is an advertiser for the State as the News for Charlotte and Mecklenburg. Such enterprise is bewildering as it is admirable. We have the pleasure of noting among its hale and well-fed looking men of the State our own Col. James P Cook, of Concord.

Miss Watson Excels.
Miss Anna Watson, eldest daughter of Mrs. M.M. Watson, of this place, has been for the last two years prosecuting her art studies in Paris. In a recent competitive examination of paintings by American artists, Miss Watson received the highest mark for excellence. There were more than 200 pictures exhibited but only that of Miss Watson attained the maximum degree. Her acquaintances here will be delighted to know of her success. Fort Mill Times.
