PESTS IN MARTINIQUE-MAN'S PERVERSITY.

It was said after the first over hrow of St. Pierre that the ex plorers would face a deadly danger in . the venomous serpent, fer-de-lance.

The poison is so deadly that few persons survive the bite and woodmen save themselves by quickly chapping off the limb that is bitten by the snake. He is a born enemy, too, and seeks his man and follows him till man or snake is killed.

mountains chiefly, but when Seismic disturbances occur they descend to the lower lands. Hence it was expected that St. Pierre wou'd be a den of these for $1.25, $2.00, $5.00 and the reptiles. .

The story of pests on the is land of Martinivue is interesting.

The time was when, like Cuba, there were no poisonous snakes there, but rats of voracious breed were an unbearable plague and some one learned that the fer-de-lance is a good exterminator and secured some from ment. Call and buy a Kodak, Trinidad. It was a success, for the rats were soon gone. But about it. alas! the snakes were infinitely worse than the rats for they drove the people out of their farming lands.

It is painful enough to learn that the stories of cruelty by pinos have too much truth in lipps. them. The truth does not carry justification, however, and the airing given to the matter in Dr. J C Davis. Congres should bring back to the the army a wholesome restraint against uncivilized methods. There seems !ittle doubt that the American soldiery allowed itself to become exasperated over acts of a people of whom little better could be exexpected and then were almost as savage as the Filipinos by way of retaliation. It is shameful on the American army that it day School at 4 p. m. Services should be cruel to a weaker foe and be justly compared with Spain in war methods.
