CANADA SETS GOOD EXAMPLE

Co-Operative Organization at St. Catharines Ships Large Quantities of Fruit to the West.

The St. Catharines, Ontario, Cold Storage company is a good example of a concern organized as a joint stock company, yet working steadily in the direction of true co-operation. This society was organized in 1896, and has a mechanical cold storage plant valued at $13,000 and a working capital of $2,000. A part of the capital was secured by mortgage on the property. The debt has been entirely paid off by the addition of new members who took stock, and by applying the dividends on the stock to this purpose.

Working capital has also been provided. The society is now endeavoring to effect an equal division of shares, with each member holding a certain amount of stock. To do this it is transferring stock of the old members holding more than this amount to new members and to old members not holding so much. Thus the society will be conducted eventually on a one-man-one-vote basis.

The company ships to all parts of Ontario and Quebec and to many parts of western Canada, the shipments consisting of apples, pears, peaches, plums, cherries, grapes and an increasing quantity of other fruits and vegetables. The sales amount to about $75,000 annually. The society handles supplies for its members and others. It handles fruit for non-members, and sells supplies to them, paying over one-half as much profit per dollar as it returns to members. The supply branch is a very important part of the business of the society, as it handles all kinds of fruit packages, spray pumps, and other machinery, ladders, etc., seeds, fertilizers and spraying chemicals. It has now become the temporary wholesaler for the federation of fruit associations. In 1908 the supplies amounted to about $27,000 and in 1909 to $40,000. The society charges a little less than regular market prices and then rebates to members and to non-members buying through the association and selling their fruit the same way, the percentage of rebate depending upon the amount of business done with the society.

Help Our Cotton Growers.

The Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America are making an appeal for the use of cotton for bagging. At present jute is used generally, being a little cheaper than cotton, but the millions paid by American consumers for jute go abroad, while the same or a little greater amount spent on cotton fabric would go into American pockets. Jute is raised mostly in India and very productive.

Cotton could be used to advantage in place of jute for holding grains, sugar, salt, coffee, beans, potatoes, meats and many other articles. It could also replace jute in rope and twine.

Solve Market Problem.

Because a man grows good fruit is no indication that he is selling that fruit for what it is really worth. It is one thing to grow the fruit, and another thing to sell it. Co-operative marketing associations solve the marketing problem, and enable the grower to get full value.

Disease Preventive.

The man who keeps everything neat and clean about his hog yards is not very apt to have trouble from cholera or any other disease, provided of course, that he feeds good, clean feed.

Keep Boar by Himself.

Give the herd boar a per by himself and grain enough to keep in good condition.

FARMERS FORM NEW SOCIETY

Aims to Affiliate All Organizations for Action Along Lines of Country Life Questions.

The objects outlined by the new constitution adopted by the Farmers' National congress in New Orleans, are to affiliate all societies for action along lines of broad country life questions; to aid in establishing state and local organizations devoted to country life; to secure co-operation among producers; to aid in general and vocational education of farmers, and to further the passage and execution of laws which will promote country life.

This constitution provides for two kinds of membership. Persons may become annual members by paying annual dues of one dollar; after attending one annual meeting, annual members may become life members by the payment of ten dollars, or after attending four annual meetings they may become life members upon the payment of one dollar. Associations, institutions and departments may become members, and send delegates upon payment of ten dollars for one delegate and five dollars for each additional delegate. Organizations with four to eight thousand members are entitled to two delegates each; eight to sixteen thousand members, three delegates, and one additional delegate for each additional sixteen thousand members.

Each delegate has one vote, but individual members from a given state are to pool their votes and vote by states. Each state delegation is entitled to as many votes in the annual meeting as there are multiples of ten thousand farms in the state. There being something like seven million farms in the United States, this would provide about seven hundred votes from all states. It is believed that there are about fifteen hundred country life organizations which may be considered by the council eligible to membership; with the additional delegates from large organizations there may be approximately two thousand delegates representing organizations. This means a possible delegate body in annual meeting with between twenty-five hundred and three thousand votes.

Besides the usual executive officers, there is a council made up of one member from each state, and this council elects an executive of five members chosen from the membership of the council. There is also a vice-president for each state, who is chairman of his state delegation.

It is expected the individual membership will be rapidly increased to thousands, or even tens of thousands, and also that most eligible organizations will adhere within a few years. This will provide an annual budget of some tens of thousands of dollars. The congress will have its annual meetings in the same technical and business manner as the various co-operative societies.

The annual meeting will be held under a new order of business. It will be very greatly improved by the use of printed matters.

There is a provision for auditing the accounts of the congress. The constitution may be amended in either of two ways. Upon a year's notice it can be changed by a two-thirds vote at the annual meeting; or, after discussion, at an annual meeting, it can be amended by mail, or by return postal card vote, within thirty days after the annual meeting.

The new constitution was made at once operative, and the old officers, who had been elected for a two-year term, were retained for the ensuing year. The president is C. F. Sanford, London, O., and the secretary is J. H. Kimble, Port Deposit, Md.; John M. Stahl of Chicago is legislative agent, and W. L. Ames of Wisconsin is treasurer.

RECALLS A ROMANCE

Auction of Old Michigan Court-house Brings Up Odd Story.

Building at Berrien Springs Once Owned by a Young Widow Who Was Weaned and Won by a Chicagoan in an Odd Place.

Berrien Springs, Mich.—The old Berrien county courthouse at Berrien Springs, Mich., connected with which there is an unusual Chicago romance, has been advertised to be sold under the hammer, in order to satisfy an indebtedness that has been hanging over it for some time.

A Chicago minister named Flavius J. Probst once married into the possession of Mrs. Julia Allen, a pretty young widow of the former county seat. She became a member of a party invited to go through one of the big Chicago water tunnels, and on this trip, so the story goes, she met Mr. Probst, and before either of them had again saw daylight they had fallen in love with each other, he proposed and she accepted. They were subsequently married, and took up their abode in the jail section of the old county courthouse, where they spent their honeymoon and lived happily for some time.

Then came a ripple in this odd sea of matrimony. The wife set up the claim that her husband had hypnotized her into deeding him the courthouse property, and there was a suit to set aside the transfer. This suit hung in the courts for some years, and it had many of the angles of the famous Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce case in Dickens' "Bleak House," and people began to say that there wasn't much chance for Mrs. Probst getting judgment until the day of judgment or until the old courthouse had rotted away from the ravages of time. But a son of Mrs. Probst by her first marriage ultimately effected a settlement, and again the building passed back to the ownership of Mrs. Probst.

Berrien Springs at the time the old courthouse was housing the governmental business of Berrien county enjoyed as much distinction as a Gretchen Green as St. Joseph since has taken to itself. Lovers paddled their canoes up and down the St. Joe river, stopping long enough at Berrien to be married in its quaint old courthouse. Children and grandchildren of Michigan, Indiana and Illinois pioneers pledged their troths within its shadow and were joined in matrimony from its cradle benches.

The people of this section of Berrien county say to this day that St. Joe boasters stole the county seat, and long after Mrs. Allen had acquired the old buildings the promoters of the big dome overlooking Lake Michigan evinced genuine regret that they hadn't carried the historic old building along with the books.

Why has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound found so much success? Why has it lived and thrived and kept on doing its glorious work among the sick women of the world for more than 30 years?

Simply and surely because of its sterling worth. The reason no other medicine has ever approached its success is plainly and simply because there is no other medicine so good for women's ills.

Here are two letters that just came to the writer's desk—only two of thousands, but both tell a comforting story to every suffering woman who will read them—and be guided by them.

FROM MRS. D. H. BROWN. Iola, Kansas.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so fat. I continued taking it until I had taken 12 bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. BROWN, 809 North Walnut Street, Iola, Kan.
