WOODROW WILSON TAKES SOLEMN OATH

Shares Plaudits of Nation, Vice President Marshall Also Sworn in for Another Term.

Washington, March 5.—Woodrow Wilson, with the major part of the world at war, and America poised on its verge, consecrated his second inauguration as President of the United States today with a message of hope for peace.

Standing in the shadows of the Nation's Capitol, with his face turned toward the Eastern wearied skies, the President renewed his oath of allegiance to the Constitution, praying to Almighty God that he might be given wisdom and prudence to do his duty in the true spirit of the American people.

While trumpets blared and martial accoutrements rattled prophetically about him the President pictured the deep wrongs the United States patiently had borne in the conflict of other peoples without wishing to wrong or injure in return.

Asserting that the tragedies of another continent had removed provincialism and made American citizens of the world, and that the principles of this Republic should be applied to a liberation of mankind, he resolutely voiced a determination that America, standing "firm in armed neutrality," must demonstrate her claim to a "minimum of right and freedom of action" in world affairs.

Peculiar interest and significance in the light of his rebuke last night to Senators who prevented passage of the armed neutrality bill were attached to the President's assertion. Ever more interest and concern were aroused when he added:

"We may even be drawn on, by circumstances, not by our own purpose or desire, to a more active assertion of our rights as we see them and a more immediate association with the great struggle itself. But nothing will alter our thought or our purpose. We desire neither conquest nor advantage. We wish nothing that can be had only at the cost of another people. We have always professed unselfish purpose and we convert the opportunity to prove that our professions are sincere."

Making no attempt to review the legislative record of the last four years, the President said this was no time for retrospect. The time was one to speak of thoughts and purposes for the immediate future. To be indifferent to the influence of the war upon America, or independent of it, he said, was impossible, and he was firm in the conviction that the part this country wished to play in the vital turmoil was the part of those "who mean to vindicate and fortify peace."

These were the dominant thoughts of the President as he addressed the cheering multitude in the broad plaza of the Capitol grounds. In the assemblage before him American citizens of all Nations had sung "America" with a mighty voice while waiting for his appearance on the inaugural stand. And in the procession which followed him to the White House and passed in review "a composite and cosmopolitan people" gave graphic evidence of loyalty and patriotism.

"We are American citizens" flared from banners borne by once alien hands. "We are ready to fight and die for America," was the stirring message blazing from a standard waving over the heads of new American citizens from Poland. Men of many foreign accents held to the breeze as they marched past the Chief Executive other insignia of patriotic Americanism, and the words "America First," emblazoned from countless streamers aroused the throngs along Washington's broad thoroughfares to continual outbursts of patriotic fervor.
