An Original Serial.

Mrs. Percis Anna Hartsig disappeared in Detriot eight years ago, and 1 body picked up on the railroad tracks near that place, horribly mangled, was identified by Mrs. Hartsig's relatives, and buried by them. A week ago last Wednesday the real Mrs. Hartsig walked into the office of her son, E. A. Hart- FRANK H. CONVERSE.

The story told by Lewis W. Hartsig, a son of the missing woman, and living at No. 1308 west Adams street, is a very romatic one. He says his mother, together, with his father and six children, lived together at No. 336 east High street, Detroit, eight years ago, and that his mother was mentally deranged on account of ill health. The family decided to send her to the Pontiac Lunatic Asylum, and from this place she escaped twice within two months. Mrs. Hartsig was not a dangerous lunatic, but the family thought it best to return her to the asylum, as the physicians had hopes that they might finally restore her reason. Her son Lewis arranged to have her returned, but Mrs. Hartsig discovered what was about to take place, and on the night before her contemplated removal she escaped, and this was the last seen of her by any member of her family until a week aga last Wednesday.

The family of Mrs. Hartsig notified the Detroit police of her disappearance, and the following day the body of a woman was discovered dead on the tracks of the Detroit and Michigan road twenty miles from Detroit. The body was in a mangled condition, and the clothing was literally torn from the woman's form. The Harring family were notified, and they identified the body as that of their mother. A Detroit dentist also identified the goldplated false teeth which were in the mouth of the dead woman as those sold to Mrs. Hartsig. The body was taken in charge by the Hartsigs and given a decent burial at Elmwood Cemetery,

Mrs Harting owned the property at No. 838 east High street, Detriot, which |s valued at $5,000, and her will was duly probated and the rents of the property have since been collected by James E. Hartsig, husband of Mrs. birs. Hartsig, in telling her story to her family after their happy reunion, said she traveled by rail to Benton Harbor, Mich., after leaving her home in Detroit, and was taken in charge by the Benion Harbor police on her arrival at that place, on account of her strange actions. The authorities placed her in sanitarium at Benton Harbor, and there she remained for twelve manths and was then pronounced cured. But Mrs. Hartsig during her last attack of insanity had forgotten her name. The nearest she could come to her correct name was Anna Hartman. She did not even know that she had come from Detroit, and there was nothing about her closing or jewelry by which she could identify herself. She had no place in particular to go, and decided to come to Chicago. She secured a situation as nurse in Evanston about seven years ago, and has amassed a small fortune in that city.

Mrs. Hartsig was reading a newspaper a week ago last Wednesday, her son says, and happened to see the nane E. have been successful. In order to keep A. Hartsig, which was the name of her son.
