A SERIOUS DIFFICULTY.

Charles Honeycutt and Will Martin, of No. 3, On into a Row—Martin May Die as Result. On last Friday morning a row occurred between Charles Honeycutt and Will Martin, at the residence of Nathaniel Fulham, in No. 3 township, in which Martin received injuries at the hands of Honeycutt that may prove fatal.

The difficulty occurred Friday morning about 10 o'clock. It seems that there had been some trouble the night before between Martin and his wife at their home. Friday morning Martin's wife took her two children and went to Mr. Fulham's. When Martin found out she had gone he got his gun and started to hunt her. He passed by the house of John Forney, colored, who persuaded him to give up his gun.

Martin then went on to Fulham's and Forney followed him. When he got to Fulham's he asked his wife what she meant by leaving home. She said something to him, and he said they would settle the matter right then. Martin started to take his wife away, when Fulham put him out of his house and shut the door. Then Honeycutt's wife, who is a sister of Mrs. Martin, came up and begged to abuse Martin for mistreating her sister. Martin told her it was none of her business, when Mrs. Honeycutt began to curse him. Martin then said he didn't want to have any trouble. Meantime Honeycutt came up, and told Martin that he didn't allow any d--d man to abuse his wife.

After a few words Honeycutt and Martin clinched. It is said that Martin had Honeycutt by the collar with his left hand and a bottle of whiskey in his right. Honeycutt claims that Martin reached for a pistol. Honeycutt jerked himself away from Martin, picked up a sand bolster of a one-horse wagon, which is about four feet long, and hit Martin on the head with it. The blow was a powerful one, and Martin was of course knocked senseless. Martin's nose was broken, one eye knocked out and his skull fractured. Martin was left until nearly night before medical attention was secured.

He was attended by Dr. D. J. Gouger, and by Drs. Lafferty and Maxwell, of Davidson. Martin has never regained consciousness and is in a serious condition. These are the facts as they can be obtained from conflicting reports. Honeycutt is now in jail here awaiting a preliminary hearing.

The Mooresville correspondent of the Charlotte Observer gives the following account of the affair: News was received here this afternoon of a very distressing family row over in Cabarrus county, along the line of that county and Mecklenburg. One William C. Martin had been drunk for several days, and last night beat his wife unmercifully. The wife is the mother of twin babies just five weeks old. Martin's nephew, Charles Rogers, who works on the place, held Martin while the wife escaped with the children to a neighbor's, Nathaniel Fulham, where they were cared for during the night. This morning between 11 and 12 o'clock Martin followed his wife and renewed the quarrel, and again began to beat her. Charles Honeycutt, who lives near Fulham's, and who married Mrs. Martin's sister, went to the scene, accompanied by his wife. All four of the husbands and wives became engaged in the melee, when Honeycutt struck Martin on the head with a part of a wagon bolster, fracturing the skull, breaking the nose and knocking one eye entirely out. Martin lies unconscious and is not expected to live many hours. All parties to the affair live in the Popetown settlement. Mrs. Martin and the infant children have fared badly at the hands of the man, it is said, and the public is in sympathy with her.

A Snake Story. Mr. R. M. Kimmons, of No. 3, tells us a snake story that is just a little ahead of anything we have ever heard of. He says that some time ago Mr. R. W. Fleming found a black snake which had swallowed a porcelain door knob that had a six-inch shank to it. The snake was found when found, the dose it swallowed of course being responsible for its death. It is well that both Mr. Kimmons and Mr. Fleming have an unswerving reputation for truthfulness and sobriety.
