PRODUCTION OF PEANUTS.

The Farm Crop Which Should be Largely Expanded on Account of Its Great Food Value.

The commercial crop of peanuts produced in this country is wholly of Southern growth, originating largely in territory immediately tributary to the Southern Railway lines, in Virginia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina. That this is true is indicated in the fact that these States have recently taken renewed interest in the crop through a genuine demand and a more satisfactory range of prices than prevailed a few years ago.

The small area devoted to the peanut is out of all proportion to its value economically. As with other oleaginous nuts and seeds—as in the case of cotton-seed a few years ago—its uses have been more shrewdly availed of by the European manufacturer than by the manufacturer of the United States. At Marseilles, France, for instance, one of the heaviest importations is the peanut, which is manufactured into oil, great quantities of which is accepted without question by thousands of consumers as olive oil. The United States Consul at Marseilles recently said that "The people of all others best able to give an expert opinion as to the merits of peanut oil for table purposes, and who annually consume considerable quantities under the name of, and perhaps, too, faintly diluted with, olive oil, reside in the United States." In Germany cold-pressed oil of African or American peanuts is used as salad oil and for various culinary purposes, the price of which, wholesale, ranges from 56 cents to one dollar per gallon, which is far cheaper than any edible quality of olive oil that can be imported and sold in that country. The yield of oil from the first pressing is ordinary oil cakes. A daily allowance of four to six pounds of the cake, given in the form of paste and mixed with two or three pounds of bran, constitutes a perfect food for milk cows. I have had cows so fed for several years yielding well and breeding regularly. For sheep there is no better food than peanut cake, but for these animals I found it best to give the cake dry and broken into small pieces. I had a large flock fed on the cake for several years, and never knew any bad results, attending its use. The ewes so fed bred regularly, milked well, and reared excellent lambs, while the mutton of these cake fed sheep was of superior quality.

Many experiments have proved the value of the cake as a feed for pigs. For these animals it is usually made a thin gruel and given mixed with bran. This same preparation, but not quite so thin a condition, constitutes a superior food for fattening poultry. The flesh of poultry fattened on the cake is white, fine and of superior quality. The remarkable feeding value of the plant itself, in the form of hay, has been shown in the table of analyses employed in the division of this article devoted to live stock production.

More remarkable still are the authoritative claims asserted in behalf of the peanut as human food. The United States Department of Agriculture, in the course of its investigation of the peanut, in 1896, reproduced a comparative table of twelve principal foods, prepared by Prof. König, of Germany, based on prices in that country, showing the peanut meal to be the most nutritive, as well as the cheapest food procurable.

No Hunting in Palestine.
The late Bishop Beckwith, of Georgia, was fond of his gun, and spent much of his time hunting, says a representative from that State. One day the Bishop was out with dog and gun, and met a member of his parish, whom he reproved for inattention to his religious duties. "You should attend church, and read your Bible," said the Bishop. "I do read my Bible, Bishop," was the answer, "and I don't find any mention of the apostles going a-shooting."

"No," replied the Bishop, "the shooting was bad in Palestine, so they went fishing instead."
Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Also Intely Harmless.
The fault of giving children medicine containing injurious substances, is sometimes more disastrous than the disease from which they are suffering. Every mother should know that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly safe for children to take. It contains nothing harmful and for coughs, colds and croup is unsurpassed. For sale by M. L. Marsh and D. D. Johnson.

Grasped the Idea.
"What is your order, sir?" asked the waiter.
"Bring me some frenzied eggs," said the man with the napkin tucked under his chin.
And presently there was a distinctly audible scramble in the kitchen.

FEWER ACRES IN COTTON AND MORE HOG AND HORNIN.

News and Observer.

The unanimous sentiment of the great gathering of cotton growers in Raleigh this week was to hold their cotton for better prices, reduce the acreage, and raise more hog and hominy. To carry into effect this desirable result a permanent organization has been effected with Col. John S. Cunningham, of Person, as president. Col. Cunningham will take active steps to effect a thorough organization, and the slogan will be "Sell no cotton at present prices, reduce the acreage, and raise home supplies." In the important work mapped out by the resolutions adopted the associations deserves and should receive the co-operation of every cotton farmer and other Southern business man. Col. Cunningham will press the work with zeal and enthusiasm, and leave no stone unturned to carry out the mandates of the convention that elected him.

Delegates embracing a number of the wisest and most successful farmers in the State have been appointed to attend the Southern convention to be held at New Orleans the latter part of this month. The meeting will be of the highest importance. It will consider the various plans recommended by the several states and adopt the plan deemed wisest. With Texas and North Carolina—the extreme Northern and extreme Southern States that grow cotton—and the intervening cotton states working in harmony the cotton farmers can win their fight. There is no power that can stand against the united action of the cotton growers of the South in their battle for fair prices for their product.

The large crop of cotton of 1898-9 (11,274,840 bales) brought $282,773,974. The smallest crop since, that of 1903-4, (10,011,374 bales) brought $518,797,339. That is to say that the farmers got $381,023,365 in 1903-4 for 1,263,466 less bales of cotton than they got in 1898-9 for many more bales of cotton. Experience has proved beyond question that cotton farmers get more money gross for a small crop than for a large one. Does not this prove that the acreage should be reduced?

Many bears have sold contracts and during the next three months they must get cotton or they will lose large sums of money. This accounts for their frantic effort to press down the price of cotton. Only this week one such firm paid seven cents for a certain lot of cotton in Tarboro to fulfill a contract. If farmers will refuse to sell at seven or eight, the price will go higher in the spring if the cotton acreage has been greatly decreased.

Fall River Strike Ended.

The settlement of the Fall River strike is one of the first proofs of the value to Massachusetts of a business Governor. Nothing but the confidence which laboring men in the Bay State feel in Gov. Douglas's integrity, experience and fairness could have reconciled them to going back to work at reduced wages, leaving to his adjustment a complicated schedule of wage increases as manufacturers' profits grow.

The strike has cost $5,000,000. The conditions for it were peculiarly unfavorable. The high price of cotton for a last year placed all manufacturers at a disadvantage, and the damaging competition of Southern mills, near the field of supply, newly and well equipped and worked largely by child labor employed for long hours, has shown how far-reaching are the results in these days of such disastrous rivalry.

It will be well for the men, women and children of Massachusetts as well as for those of the Carolinas when child labor and excessive working hours are made impossible.

Brutally Tortured.
A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equalled. Joe Golobick, of Colusa, Calif., writes, "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known, I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by all Druggists.

GOOD FOR MRS. SMITH.

Monroe Journal.

We bid Mrs. Smith, of Pelham, N. C., hail and good day! Hear the Greensboro Record tell about her: "Some unknown woman, so veiled that the features could not be fully distinguished, called on Mrs. C. P. Smith of that place the other evening, and informed her that her husband had made an appointment with a young woman for that evening. 'If you will be at the Red church in Pelham Manor at 10 o'clock tonight you will see for yourself,' she said. The woman came again at 6 o'clock the next evening. 'Mrs. Smith,' she began, 'you did not keep your appointment. I am sorry, for I am putting to great inconvenience to give you this friendly advice. Your husband has an appointment to-night.' Mrs. Smith was so enraged that she called for her daughter, Celia, to bring her a horse whip. The stranger remarked that she was not afraid, as she had a man standing at the gate, but this did not alarm her. With her whip she lashed the woman across the face until she begged for clemency. The woman fled to the front veranda, where she grappled with Mrs. Smith and threw her. In falling Mrs. Smith grabbed the woman by the hair and pulled out a handful of it. While Mrs. Smith was down, the other woman dashed down the steps and ran. Mrs. Smith, accompanied by her daughter, pursued the fleeing stranger for a mile, through vacant lots and across ditches, but she escaped."

This is a new treatment for the gossip mongers, whose delight is to besmirch character or to wreck happiness whenever they can. We love Mrs. Smith. Her action is too good to go unrecorded. State exchanges, please copy.

The Mystery of Knowledge.

A Bostonian the other day was praising the astronomical work of Percival Lowell.

"Before the last total eclipse of the sun," he said, smiling, "Mr. Lowell observed to an old colored man whom he liked, 'George, if you'll watch the chickens out at your place to-morrow morning about eleven o'clock you'll see them go to roost.'"
"Hi, hi! George laughed, 'Hi, hi! Dar's a good joke.'"
"He thought, you see, that Mr. Lowell was fooling him. But when at about eleven o'clock the next morning the sun darkened and the chickens did go to roost, George was amazed and somewhat horrified. He sought Mr. Lowell out, and said, 'What you done to me wuz true, sah. Mah chickens went to roost, sah, jest laik you said dey would.'"
"Yes, George, I suppose they did," the astronomer returned.

"How long, sah, did you know 'bout dis?" said George.
"Oh, a long time."
"Did you know dey would go to roost a year ago?"
"Yes; fully a year ago."
"Well, dat beats all," said George, in an awed voice. "Dem chickens wuzn't hatched a year ago."

The New York of To-Day.

The new Board of Health estimate of the city's present population renders possible an interesting comparison with that of the nearer and further suburbs as deduced from the census totals and growth percentages of 1900:
New York City, 3,888,024.
Outside city, but within twenty miles of City Hall, 1,409,770.
Twenty to fifty miles from City Hall, 775,355.

A fairly metropolitan population of five and a quarter million living between Garden City on the east, Summit on the west and Dobb's Ferry on the north; a metropolitan and suburban population of just six millions between Bridgeport, Conn., Cornwall, N. Y., and Flemington, N. J.—such is the "Greater New York" of to-day.

At the Other End.
A certain naval officer was very pompous and conceited when on duty. One day, when he was officer of the watch, and he could not, as usual, find anything of consequence to grumble about, he attempted to take it out of one of the machinists who was in the engine-room attending to his duty. Going to the speaking-tube the officer yelled, "Is there a blithering idiot at the end of this tube?"
The reply came quick and startling. "Not at this end, sir!"

No Fits Shown.
"For years face was after me continuously," writes F. A. Colledge, Verbena, Ala. "I had a terrible case of Piles causing 24 tumors. When all failed Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me. Equally good for Burns and all aches and pains. Only 50c at all Druggists."

A NEW WALK COMING.

Washington Times.

A new walk is coming in with the new year. It is already here, but it will take until the dawn of 1906 to become perfect in it. It is different from any other, walk that was ever seen, though in certain ways it resembles the Grecian bend, which was the ambition of our mothers and grandmothers in 1870.

The new walk requires these things: Wide shoulders and a little waist. High heeled shoes with wide soles. Big hips and flat back.

A certain carriage which is known as the military carriage.
The girl who is getting the 1905 walk would do well to visit some near-by military station and study the soldiers. If she can get a West Point cadet to teach her so much the better. The new walk will be the military walk with certain improvements and changes.

To get ready to walk stand erect and throw back the shoulders. Now expand the chest. Next square the elbows, holding them down to your sides, not out. Now draw in the abdomen, lift the feet high, and walk.

The first time you try this you will feel like a trussed chicken. The second time it will not be quite so bad. After a while you will get the hang of it, just as you get the hang of the bicycle, and you will be able to work it all right.

Why Gibbs Deserted.

Tessie Gibbs, Benjamin's wife, appeared before Judge Dunne in Chicago, as it is related by the Record Herald, and asked for a divorce on the ground of desertion. Mrs. Gibbs was dramatic when she took the stand.

"Why did he desert me?" she demanded. "Why, for po other reason than because he got weary of me—he felt tired of home, and he wanted to wander around the country. After he had left me I met him on the street one day. I stopped, so did he.
"Mr. Gibbs," says I, 'why don't you come home?'
"Don't talk to me of such things," says he. 'I've got some money for coffee and sandwiches and I'm sleepin' in cars. It's fine.'"

Stomach Troubles and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are the best thing for stomach troubles and constipation I have ever sold," says J. R. Cullman, a druggist of Pottsville, Mich. "They are easy to take and always give satisfaction. I tell my customers to try them and if not satisfied to come back and get their money, but have never had a complaint." For sale by M. L. Marsh and D. D. Johnson.
