SAN JONES' LETTERS.

Atlanta Journal.

My travels across this country year after year but impress me more and more that this is an immense country, made of forty-nine states and territories, all kinds of soil and folks, all kinds of climate and companies.

Last week I was in the busy east amongst the roar of furnaces, the clatter of machinery, the hum of voices and the whist of business. This week I am amongst the cattle and corn, hogs and horses, wheat and oats granaries of the west. Plenty to do in the east and plenty to do in the west. In the east they are hard at it the year round. In the west they work six months and rest and loaf six months. In the east they are raising something; in the west they are raising something. The one toils and toils and the other toils and waits.

Pittsburg, Pa., is the center of our manufacturing activity. It was here that Carnegie and Frick and Standard Oil magnates, and thousands of others have made their millions. Coal, iron, oil and gas make a combination that turns out millions, just like a henney turns out eggs. Pig iron, plate glass steel billets, steel pipe, steel roofing, bridge structural, steel for bridges and building. In fact, every thing from armour plate to pocket knives besides those industries which furnish the world with everything made of copper, lead, silver, gold and wood, one will find in and around Pittsburg. Next to the broad and almost infinite manufacturing interest one is most impressed with the immense tonnage handled by the railroads. A hundred thousand cars of iron, coal and coke per day besides the passing through of this gateway from east to west and from west to east of perhaps nearly an equal amount. Double track and four track railroads with all that genius and the most un stinted supply of railroad equipment can alone move the traffic and not infrequently there is a congestion that almost paralyzes the whole business from railroad president to brakeman.

The Pennsylvania lines, the Vanderbilt and Gould lines, center here and are at the limit of endeavor to handle and haul the traffic offered them. How they can get their numberless passenger trains in and out through all this congestion is a puzzle to me. If I were to puzzle over it I would as soon undertake the problem of perpetual motion as to understand how they move in such order through such a dense chaos of cars and tracks as this. It makes a fellow dizzy to look at the scene. If the present crowd now handling that traffic were to step down and out and turn it over to a new crowd chaos would reign and such a mess the world has never seen.

Occasionally one sees a news item saying that the Pennsylvania railroad proposes to make a loan of a hundred million dollars for improvements and betterments. Then a fellow who has not been over the ground wonders what they will do with all that money. But looking over the ground a fellow wonders that brains and money enough to do all this could ever be gotten together. Railroads all over the United States are spending all they make and some of them all they can borrow in betterments and extension. Oh, the infinite present and future of this great country. It would take the vision of a prophet indeed to see what and where things will be a hundred years hence.

I am sure the great manufacturing and commercial interests were never in better shape than now. Nothing and nowhere is booming, but everything and everywhere seems to have a steady glow of prosperous life with no signs of let up or hindrance.

The tide is beginning to set southward, and we will soon begin to feel its flow. The west, even as far as California, will soon be full, and the long hard winters of the middle west and the northwest make the South so much more desirable. The railroads are beginning now to call attention to the South and giving cheap excursion rates, and when the advantages of the South shall be fully shown then we will have a constant influx and our lands will soon double in value, our towns and cities will grow apace, and we will be on a tide of prosperity that we know not of at this present time. If we can keep pace in moral life with the growth that comes, then I hail the influx with welcome and delight. As Frank Potts would say, I want "our sort of folks" to come and make their homes amongst us. Those who fear God and reverence the Sabbath. Them's my "sort of folks."

I am rejoiced to see of the religious awakenings all over the world, in Australia, in England, in Wales and many cities of the United States. It seems that the tide is rising again and I pray

MONTÉ CARLO.

High up on a rock-ribbed promontory extending into the Mediterranean Sea is situated the city of Monaco, with its few thousand population and with a reputation world-wide. It, with a surrounding territory of the same name, comprises an area of about six square miles, and forms an independent principality. This is Monte Carlo. About one thousand of the inhabitants are employed in the rooms and the gardens of the celebrated Casino. These gambling places are legalized, and built on ground leased from the Prince of Monaco, and are owned by a joint stock company. The capital of Monaco is under French protection. The territory is encircled by the French department of Alpes Maritimes and the sea. The government has in it many earmarks of the Middle Ages.

The revenue from the "tables" alone is so large that it not only pays the running expenses of this city, which is thrown open to all comers, but also the taxes of the entire principality of Monaco besides. There is a government pawnshop, which occupies one of the most prominent buildings in the little city. A huge sign stands up on it, announcing that advances are made on jewels, etc. The tables are never empty. It is a very common sight to see staid old fathers and mothers, bent with age, there with a fixed amount to place on the turn of fortune's wheel. Men and women of all ages sit around, figuring mentally, and some with paper and pencil, schemes and combinations by which they hope and expect to "beat" the game.

There are times when tables will suffer a run of bad luck, and in order to prevent the possibility of a damaging run on the bank, when a table has lost a certain amount as set by the operators and understood by the gamblers, it is closed or discontinued for that day or night. One table can lose only a given amount, while its winnings are unlimited. The greater part of the world does not know or half conceive on how gigantic a plan this gambling operation is carried on. Suicides and attempted suicides, crazed men and women, ruined and enriched people, are common products of the roulette-table.

Monte Carlo is a great and popular watering-place, and is said to be a much-frequented resort for consumptives. It abounds with rich tropical gardens, with beautiful plants, inviting arbors and shaded walks; it has one of the finest orchestras in all Europe. But the great bulk of the audience sees not the gardens or hears the music as it listens for the click of the little ball on its journey, which means fortune or misfortune to them.

An Act to Enable Married Men to Sell Their Real Estate.

An important law in reference to rights of married men was enacted by the Legislature, providing that every man, whose wife is a lunatic, confined in any asylum for insane persons, in North Carolina, shall have the right to sell and convey any of his real estate by deed, except his homestead, without the signature and private examination of his wife: Provided the superintendent of the asylum in which his wife is confined shall certify that she is of insane mind and memory.

South's Cotton World's Hope.

The report of the commissioners sent out by the British government to inspect the cotton growing possibilities in East Africa is published in the form of a white paper. It says:

"Unless difficulties which at present appear to be insuperable can be removed, cotton cultivation in East Africa will never be undertaken on any considerable scale."

First among the difficulties the commissioners place labor; on account of the apathy of the natives and their disinclination for work. The total acre devoted to cotton growing under European supervision can scarcely exceed a few thousand acres. The commissioners' opinion is that the only solution of the difficulty is indentured labor from India or China.

For an Impaired Appetite.

Loss of appetite always results from faulty digestion. All that is needed is a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They will invigorate the stomach, strengthen the digestion and give you an appetite like a wolf. These Tablets also act as a gentle laxative. For sale by M. L. Marsh and D. D. Johnson.

GETTING RICH IS A BAD HABIT.

Millionaire Nelson Says He Takes None of Profits of His Big Business Enterprise.

N. O. Nelson, of St. Louis, a millionaire against his will, recently told a Chicago audience these things about the rich and riches:

Getting rich is merely a habit—a bad habit.

Wealth piles up a load on the shoulders of the captain of industry.

Wealth is a menace to children and grandchildren who had no hand in its accumulation.

There is no comfort in living in a mansion with half a dozen servants.

I saw a $200,000 mansion the other day built from the proceeds of a cotton corner.

It will give the owner no comfort and cost the livelihood of hundreds of thousands of cotton mill operatives.

You know and I know that the hardest job a man can have is living up to a big income.

Try living with the poor. Hire a room for $1.50 a week and eat ten-cent breakfasts. It won't hurt you. The microbes of disease are no more likely to harm you there than in a steam-heated room, for which you would pay $3 to $5 a day.

Now, I have ceased to take any dividends from our business. Although it is operated in my name, the employees all get dividends on their wages, amounting during the last ten years to from four to ten per cent. This goes toward buying an interest in the business and paying for houses, except three-tenths of it, which is devoted to philanthropies.

Mr. Nelson built the town of Le Claire, Ill., opposite St. Louis, and there conducts a mammoth profit-sharing business with 4,000 employees.

What Pleases One Displeases Another

Monroe Journal.

A newspaper man may not get rich, but he gets a good deal of experience, which, if he is wise, he charges upon the profit side of the ledger. When he is young in the business it makes him feel very unhappy to be criticised. He is nearly as "touchy" as an office holder, and when a mad subscriber orders the paper stopped he feels like going to bed. But as he gets older, he doesn't mind it, and learns to feel as if he is not doing much if he doesn't get a few rounds from somebody occasionally. And then, it shows what the people are feeling and thinking, keeps him in closer touch with his constituency and makes his paper closer akin to the soil in which it flourishes. No editor should feel bad over a little criticism, especially if it is in a friendly manner and has no real venom. He learns to "give and take," and likes it.

Site Order for Eggs

Washington Post.

There is a certain lawyer of the town who devotes all his leisure time to the perpetration of elaborate and solemn jokes. Nobody on earth is too august for him to tackle. He was in London last summer, and one morning he went into a restaurant with his most dignified air, and proceeded to order breakfast.

"I want two eggs," said he to the waiter. "I want one fried on one side and the other fried on the other."

The waiter nodded and withdrew. A little later he returned.

"Beg pardon, sir," said he, "but I am afraid I didn't catch your order. Would you mind repeating it?"

"Not at all," said the American, solemnly. "I want two eggs, one of them fried on one side and the other on the other."

"Thank you, sir," said the waiter. "I thought that was what you said, but I wasn't quite sure."

Five minutes later an apologetic waiter returned to the American's elbow.

"I beg pardon, sir," said he again, "but the cook and I have had some words. Would you mind having those eggs scrambled?"

Newbro's Herpicide

The ORIGINAL remedy that "kills the dandruff germ."

It destroys the tiny vegetable growth in the sebaceous glands of the scalp, after which the hair will grow as nature intended. Don't wait until it is too late, for chronic baldness is incurable.

The microbe of dandruff and baldness makes the hair dull, brittle and lustreless. It fills the hair with dandruff and causes itching of the scalp. Later, it chokes the very life out of the hair and causes it to fall. Save it with NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE. Extraordinary results follow its use.
