STORIES OF WELL KNOWN PEOPLE

Gathered Here, There and Every-where.

Henry E. Dixey has a story of a vaudeville ventriloquist who had a talking dog. One evening the ventriloquist, decidedly on his legs, scattered into a light-lantern case, followed by the dog. When the waiter came for his order, the ventriloquist turned to the dog with the query:

"Well, Jack, what are you going to have?"

"I guess I'll take a roast beef sandwich," apparently answered the animal. The waiter gazed at the dog for an instant, and then hurried to the proprietor.

"Bay," he cried wildly, "there's a dog over there that can talk!"

The proprietor dashed over to the table. "This waiter says your dog can talk," he said. "Is it so?"

"Certainly," answered the ventriloquist. "Can you talk, Jack?"

"Of course I can talk," replied the dog.

"That animal would make a fortune in six months," said the proprietor. "I'll give you a hundred dollars for him."

"Oh, please don't sell me," pleaded the dog.

"I'm afraid I can't help it, old fellow," said the ventriloquist. "You'll be well taken care of here, and besides I need the money."

The proprietor disappeared for a minute and returned with a roll of bills, which he placed in the ventriloquist's hand. The ventriloquist rose from the table and walked toward the door. The dog was held in the strong grasp of the proprietor's hands.

"Did you really sell me?" inquired the dog, as the ventriloquist opened the door.

"Yes, Jack, I sold you for a hundred dollars."

"Well, just for that," answered the animal. "I'll never say another word."

Mark Twain was the man being spoken about.

"Ever hear of his trick with a book clerk, when he was a publisher?" asked one.

"You know the trade gives a discount on purchases to publishers, authors, friends of the proprietor, and all that. One day Twain saw a book in a store window and he wanted it. He entered.

"How much is that book?" he asked the clerk.

"Well," said he, when he received an answer, "as I'm a friend of your proprietor, I expect the usual discount."

"The clerk told him he could have it."

"Also," said Twain, "I expect the publisher's discount."

"The clerk said this also would be granted."

"And the author's discount," went on the humorist.

"Again the clerk was acquiescent."

"Twain rattled off the several discounts to which as author, friend and publisher, he was entitled, and finished by saying:

"And now, what is the price I am to pay for the book?"

"The clerk signed. "Nothing, sir," he said finally. "I find our firm owes you eighteen cents."

"George Ade, in the early days of his career, before his "Fables in Slings" had brought him fame, called one morning in Chicago upon a Sunday editor, on a mission from a theatrical manager.

"I have brought you this manuscript," he began, but the editor, looking up at the tall, timid youth, interrupted:

"I say, man, this certainly is a fine children. Where did you get it?"

"Her face expanded in a broad grin, showing a wonderful expanse of molar and bicuspids as she replied:

"I stole it from the desk of Mr. Nord, ain't you, eh?"

"Yes," replied the traveler in a surprised tone; "but what has that got to do with it?"

"Well, I was just a-thinkin' that no body but a Northern gentleman would ever ask a Southern nigger where she got her children."

English Actor (to parishoner)—Good morning, Thompson; I hear you have a son and heir?

Parishoner—Yes, sir; our household now represents the United Kingdom of Great Britain.

Actor—How so?

Parishoner—Why, you see, I am English, my wife's Irish, the nurse is Scotch, and the baby walls.

A Bad Nurse.

Some day you will get a bad nurse, when you feel a pain in your bowels, and fear appendicitis. Safety lies in Dr. King's New Life Pills, a sure cure for all bowel and stomach diseases, such as headache, biliousness, constipation, etc.

OUR STATE.

Industrial News.

North Carolina was the birthplace of the first child born of English parents on North America continent and today after more than three centuries North Carolina has the most homogeneous—the most wholly American population of any State in the Union. In every war that has come into the history of our country North Carolina has furnished her quota—more than her quota, of brave and devoted soldiers; in every field of peaceful endeavor North Carolina has borne a distinguished and useful part. And looking back over the past North Carolina's sons and daughters have every reason to be proud of the record of their dear old Mother State.

But after all, the past is past and it is in the future which looms big and important before the men and women who would achieve.

The possibilities are great, the time is ripe, the country is expectant, and the call to a broader, a more progressive, a more enlightened citizenship is being sounded by those who have looked deep and long into public affairs.

In the first place, we must put away—must bury all little petty, senseless, jealousies and remember only that what is for the good of one is for the good of all—that we are each and every one of us bound together by ties of a common inheritance; and a common destiny.

Grave and important issues are now confronting us, new and complex questions are every day rising up and demanding a careful consideration and broad-minded patriotic solution.

Animosities that arose from times and conditions which are now happily things of the past, are fast dying a natural death, and in their stead is arising a spirit of frank tolerance of difference of opinion and a closer and more cordial feeling of inter-dependence with a sincere desire for more hearty, co-operation upon all public questions. Throughout the length and breadth of the State new avenues of human activity are opening to receive the man who would do things; new industries are springing up, new and hitherto unknown progress is being made. If all of this is true, and who can deny that it is, he loves his State would be a part of the motive power which is forcing and must continue to force North Carolina to the forefront of human progress and human success, must remember that other people may differ with him and still be as honest and sincere as he and that the points of difference which divide are so very much less important than the similarities of common aims, common aspirations and interest which bind us all together in one great commonwealth, that we should bear and borbear and one altogether put our shoulders to the wheel and say to ourselves, to one another and to the world that North Carolina is the pride and glory of nearly two million North Carolinians who are determined upon one object—to make North Carolina the proudest, most prosperous and most contented and happy among the sister-hoods of States.

WANTS.

An ordinary wart is a local overgrowth or hypertrophy of the papillary layer of the skin. It may be covered on the top with the epithelial layer, which gives it a smooth surface; or the epithelium may fall away and leave the separate strings showing at the point of the wart, like so many brown or black seeds—whence the name of seed wart.

Warts of this kind occur most commonly on the hands of children. They are caused usually by the irritation of the many sorts of dirt into which the youngsters' hands are so constantly plunged. It seems probable that warts are slightly contagious, and that they may be spread through a schoolful of children by direct contact.

Sometimes warts are quite broad and flat, of a smooth surface and yellowish in color. Such occur frequently about the face and occasionally also on the hands.

Another form of flat wart may come on the back in the aged. It is broad, irregular in outline, with uneven "seedy" surface, and sometimes covered with greasy scales.

Warts vary a good deal in color. Some are indistinguishable in color from the surrounding skin, while others are pinkish, yellowish, brown, or even quite black. The dark color may be due to the deposit of pigment in the body of the wart; but it is more often, especially in children, simply dirt which has been worked down between the "seeds." Soaking them in warm soap-suds and scrubbing with the nail brush will usually restore the natural color. Some warts are, however, deeply pigmented, constituting true moles. These are more common on the skin of the chest, abdomen and back.

A wart is usually a trivial thing, but its removal is nevertheless advisable. Its prominence above the surface exposes it constantly to slight injuries which may keep it in a painful condition; it is never an ornament, and may be most unsightly; and finally, in persons getting along in years, it may take on new growth and develop into a tumor.

In children warts come and go without apparent reason, and treatment is often unnecessary; but if they persist for a long time, or when they come on the adult skin, it is better to get rid of them. Sometimes soaking in warm sea-water for ten minutes two or three times a day will cause the warts to disappear. This can be tried first, and if it fails an application of salicylic acid in colloid or touching the wart with a drop of glacial acetic acid on the end of a match will suffice.

RUSSIA.

Charlotte Observer.

Because the language necessary to describe them is not fit to be printed, this paper cannot undertake to convey to its readers any adequate idea of the atrocities which the Jews in Russia, men, women and children, have been subjected. These are preceded and attended by rebellion against the government in the very streets of St. Petersburg, by mutiny of soldiers and sailors. The empire is in a bias of revolution and the arm of the civil law is paralyzed. Conditions, instead of growing better, become worse, evidenced by the St. Petersburg dispatches of Sunday's date, which tell that the government has adopted yet more sternly repressive measures for suppressing the insurrection—for it is not less than this—by carrying fire and sword throughout the domain and hunting down suspects like wild beasts. The history of the so-called civilized country affords a parallel for conditions in Russia, present and immediately past. They may be said to offer an illustration of cause and effect. Beginning no further back than with the story of Russia's dealing with Poland, its history has been a consistent one of tyranny and repression and its rule a long record of poverty, tears and blood. Its seeds have an existence compared with which that of the coolies of China is ideal, and nowhere is to be found a counterpart for its Siberia. Its whole governmental system is not only atrociously wrong but desperately wicked, and no writer has blasted it with fiercer lightning than Tolstol, who has been called the greatest citizen of the empire. Of course those who believe in a God and in His justice know that there must be an end some time to a system which has fostered wrongs and outrages the recitals of which have shocked humanity. At times it looks as if the beginning of the end is to be marked by the crumbling of the last remnant of the imperial power, which would, of course, merely precede anarchy, out of which might finally grow, through yet more crime and bloodshed, peace and justice. A strong hand like that of Napoleon might finally seize the reins of power, dropped from the nerveless fingers of a Czar, rescue them from the grasp of the mob, and ultimately save the mob from itself.

THE ILLINOIS LITERARY SOCIETY.
A Santa Constitution.

The meeting was called to order—Major Jones, the historian, in the chair, and Colonel Brown, the novelist, under the table.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read in full, but were not half as full as the secretary.

The town poet attempted to read a poem three yards long, but was checked by refreshments being served in the middle of it, after which he was too full for utterance.

One new genius was admitted to membership on his statement that he had once been knocked down with a copy of Byron and that poetry had been running in his head ever since.

The society ordered the lynching of the critic who had handled Major Jones' "History" so roughly, but a note was read from him explaining that he had gone to Kalamazoo for his health.

At 11 p. m. Tennyson and 'possum were discussed with Literary Punch, after which the meeting adjourned itself, the members seeing each other safely home.

King of All Cough Medicines.

Mr. E. G. Case, a mail carrier of Canton Center, Conn., who has been in the U. S. Service for about sixteen years, says: "We have tried many cough medicines for cough, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time. We also find it the best remedy for coughs and colds, giving certain results and leaving no bad after effects." For sale by L. L. Marsh and D. D. Johnson, Concord, and A. W. Moore, Mt. Pleasant.

I am in receipt of a letter this morning from the State Treasurer, demanding that I collect the tax. Now you all know that I can't settle with the State and school until you pay your tax. To be able to meet the demands of the law required of me I must have by the thirty-first of this month $2000, and I haven't as yet got one-third of that amount. Now, I hope you will come to my relief and pay your tax at once or suffer the penalty of the law, which is not my fault, for I am here ready to receive it. This is all the warning I expect to give you and may expect to abide by the consequences. Respectfully,
