Why a NATIONAL BANK is Best

1. A National Bank is under the supervision of the United States Government.
2. Laws governing National Banks are very strict.
3. They are required to submit to the government a sworn detailed statement FIVE TIMES a year.
4. The stockholders are held responsible for DOUBLE the amount of their stock. This is for the benefit of the depositors.
5. The capital stock is required to be paid in cash, and must be held intact for the benefit of the depositors.
6. The Bank is required each year to add to its surplus account before declaring dividends. This is for the further security of the depositors.
7. A National Bank cannot loan more than 10 per cent. of its capital to one man or firm.

If We Can't Make That Watch of Yours Go.

You may just as well give the baby to play with. Hundreds of watches are daily sold—and it is a question with you now of buying a new one.

You ought to come here for a new watch for the same reason that prompts you to bring us your repair work—because we are in a position to give you the highest grade of satisfaction.

As we said, we can get all the service out of a watch that there is in it, down to the last tick, if you will let us look at it occasionally.

And as for new Watches—well, just take a few minutes a day to look over what we have. That's all we ask.

REMARKABLE FACTS ABOUT THE SAN FRANCISCO EARTHQUAKE.

One man had been shot for charging seventy-five cents for a loaf of bread. On Market street lay a corpse over which there was a sign which read, "Caught Stealing."

The residence of John D. Spreckles, the sugar king, was situated on Van Ness Avenue, and was one of the most costly and luxurious palaces in California. When the soldiers were given orders to demolish it with dynamite, Mr. Spreckles went on his knees on the sidewalk and begged them not to do so.

The night of the earthquake hundreds of horses in the stables throughout the city became unusually nervous. They pawed, kicked, neighed, and exhibited other signs of restlessness in their stalls. They seemed to want to break out and run away.

I am told on the best authority that several hundred people went insane the day of the shock, while scores of people who had been victims of insanity for years suddenly regained their minds. It is estimated that nearly 15,000 people have left the city.

A letter from a California woman states: "The cries of horror, the shouts of firemen, the commands of the generals, the roar of falling walls, and the thunder of exploding dynamite will live in my ears, but I will always bear the rattle of the trunks over the cobblestones as the people dragged their earthly belongings to places of safety."

David Starr Jordan, president of the Leland Stanford, Jr. University, after making a careful examination of the area affected by the earthquake, states positively that the mountains known as the Sierra Nevada Range, slipped northward from three to six feet. The backbone of the peninsula of San Francisco is part of this same range.

Following the five armies of rats invaded the unimpaired districts. There seemed to be millions on millions of them. The rats drove the rodents out of the business section, and following the example of the people, they fled in the direction where safety was promised. Naturally they were hungry, and devoured a large quantity of food that was unguarded.

In that section of San Francisco known as the Mission, and amid the general wreck and ruin, stands unharmed the Mission Dolores, the ancient church built centuries ago by the Spanish Padres. It is typically Spanish, and the oldest building in San Francisco. Of all the buildings within the zone of the disaster it apparently stood the shock the best. It stands as firm as the day it was built.

At St. Mary's cathedral occurred a notable act of spiritual and physical heroism. Tremors were running through the building and outside, and bits of mortar were falling, when two brave priests made their way to the top of the tower in spite of the continued rocking of the building, and their clinging to the cross which surmounted it, steadied the sacred emblem and prevented it from falling to the pavement.

I. W. Hellman, one of the richest men in the state, was forced by soldiers to unearth a buried oven so that bread might be baked for the refugees. The first loaf was given to Mr. Hellman as a souvenir. In many cases the disaster exemplified socialism on a remarkable scale. The rich and poor were brought to a common level as never before in the history of the world. It showed what people can do in a brotherly way when necessity demands.

The night following the earthquake, when the people were sleeping in the parks and other open places, hundreds found shelter in the massive masonry and beside the humble headpieces that mark the graves in Laurel Hill Cemetery. Those who slept in the tombs beside the caskets containing the dead, experienced a rare form of rest. One man on being asked where he had the preceding night, was heard to answer, "Oh, I found a nice, soft grave!" How about you?

The William Culler Company was in San Francisco on the day of the earthquake preparatory to sailing for Australia. A number of the male members of the company were rounded up and put to work by soldiers to assist in clearing Market street of bricks and debris. Mr. Culler himself had three hours of hard labor with a pick. John Barrymore, a brother of Ethel Barrymore, at the bayonet's point, was made to dig trenches for the same length of time, having as a companion the secretary of State of California.

The loss of the burned district, which includes principally the leading business section, is estimated at over $500,000,000. It will take over $315,000,000 to settle the insurance claims. Approximately twenty-five square miles of buildings were burned, this space being equivalent to over six hundred business blocks. The disaster left no freer soil, as is often noted in the case of lightning and cyclones. The earth simply rose and fell in an undulating motion that opened great caverns in many parts of the city and twisted the car tracks in all kinds of inconceivable shapes.

When a girl says "don't" she generally means "don't" quit.

THE WEST'S LOSS AND THE SOUTH'S GAIN.

The trite old adage about the still wind finds a new illustration in the case of the exposures of rottenness in the packing house and canned meat business. "Uncle Joe" has already pointed out that they have resulted in an increased demand for poultry, but even more marked is likely to be the increased demand for Southern hams and home-made meat products generally. In the July magazine now before us, we do not find the familiar Swift and Armour ads, but we do find a conspicuous announcement from a New York firm beginning this way:

"To People Who Object to Stock Yard Products: We make a specialty of hams and bacon cured in Virginia," "we are ordered among his best cows. The average layman cannot detect signs of tuberculosis in a cow and that is why it took a special test to discover the real condition of this apparently fine bunch of dairy cattle. Mr. Moore has been selling what he deemed the finest milk to his customers. It is not believed now that any harm has been done but there would have come a time that his milk would have been dangerous. When the abscesses on the lungs fall down trouble comes to those who buy."

The publishing of this story will hurt Mr. Moore for a while but he, his brother, Walter Moore, and his father's Mr. C. C. Moore, wish to have the facts stated so that the public may know the real situation. Mr. Moore's herd has been so reduced that it will be weeks or more before he can select and buy enough cows to be able to supply his regular customers. However, he is going to cooperate with Dr. Fisher and help to get rid of the last tubercular germ in his herd. He will buy new and healthy cows as rapidly as he can and reorgan his trade.

Since May Mr. Moore has purchased a number of cows and added them to his herd. In one instance he bought seven from one man and six from another. He was not sure of those were among the lot eliminated.

Walter Moore came in with Dr. Fisher yesterday afternoon and made a plain bold statement of facts to an observer.

In talking of the situation at Mr. Moore's farm, Dr. Fisher said: "It is almost impossible for an ordinary man, without special training, to tell whether a cow has tuberculosis or not. Tests have to be made."

"What, Dr. Fisher, will be done with these cows?" was asked.

"I do not know exactly, but it is certain that no more of their milk will be sold in Charlotte. Some of them will be killed and destroyed."

Hardly a day passes that some interesting revelation is made by Dr. Fisher. The Charlotte people are watching his work with eager interest.

FORTY COWS CONDEMNED.

More Than Half of Mr. Ernest Moore's Herd of Fine Cattle Have Tuberculosis.

Mr. Ernest Moore, who lives on the Providence road, southeast of the city, owns a herd of 90 cows. His is one of the leading dairies of the county and his cows are well bred. Dr. Adam Fisher, the city meat and milk inspector, has been at work on the Moore herd for some time, testing for tuberculosis. Yesterday, after a most painstaking investigation, he condemned 48 of the 96 and put two others on the shelf to await further developments. This came like a crack of thunder out of a clear sky to Mr. Moore and it will cripple him for days to come. It virtually means that this young man, who has just begun business for himself, will lose 88 or 90 of what he considered among his best cows. The average layman cannot detect signs of tuberculosis in a cow and that is why it took a special test to discover the real condition of this apparently fine bunch of dairy cattle. Mr. Moore has been selling what he deemed the finest milk to his customers. It is not believed now that any harm has been done but there would have come a time that his milk would have been dangerous. When the abscesses on the lungs fall down trouble comes to those who buy."

NATIONAL RIP-SAW RIPPERS.

The devil never finds fault with a hypocrite.

Worthless dogs generally have docile natures.

If you want to run a long way, don't start too fast.

"Cunning" may make money, but it don't make friends.

"Prayers" don't cut much ice unless you back them by "deeds."

Most men are "humanists" when it comes to making love.

The popularity that money buys is a kind that the devil admires.

There has never been a dollar coined that would purchase happiness.

You can't die happy unless you have made some one happy during your life.

"Dull faced" girls are generally about as useless as the things they look like.

Lots of us make great mistakes in measuring our greatness by our own yardstick.

If it was as easy to get out of debt as it was to get in, we wouldn't need credit.

The boy who believes his "Dad" knows more than he does is likely to make a useful man.

The funny how "sour" some people are at home and how "sweet" they are away from home.

When the people of this country get to doing their own thinking, they'll quit voting the millionaire's ticket.

Heaven is what the Rip-Saw thinks it is, we know a lot of people that would feel a sight more at home in hell.

The fellow who is always wanting to do something "great" is generally too darned lazy to do anything at all.

If only the girls who want to marry were permitted to learn how to cook, what a lot of "good cooks" this country would have.

If we'd all think more about "living right" and not so much about "living rich" we'd not be scared out of shirts every time we get sick.

Why is it that there's so many more men who sleep in church than women? "Cause they don't pay so much attention to what their neighbors wear."

Very Like It.

His mother tucked 4-year-old Johnny away in the top berth of the sleeping car, says a writer in the Youth. Hearing him stirring in the middle of the night, she called softly: "Johnny, do you know where you are?"

"Course I do," he returned sturdily. "I'm in the drawer."

"Keeping alive that spirit of youth," Stevenson used to say, was "the perennial spring of all the mental faculties."

How to Propose.

A Hindu father recently received the following letter asking for the hand of his daughter:

"Dear Sir: It is with a flattering penmanship that I write to have consideration with you about the prospective condition of your damsel offspring. For some remote time to past, a secret passion has been firing my bosom internally with loving fervor of my extensive jurisdiction to cruelly smother the growing love-knot that is being constructed in my within side, but the humid lamp of affection still nourishes my love-sickened heart. Hoping that you will concordantly corroborate in espousing your female progeny to my tender bosom and thereby acquire me into your family circle. Your dutiful son-in-law."

A young man went to a preacher to get married, and the preacher asked: "How old are you, John?" He replied, "I am half as old as my father. He is two years older than my mother. My eldest sister is two years older than his youngest sister. My youngest sister is four older than my youngest brother." "How old are they altogether?" asked the preacher. The young man replied that the five children are seventeen years older than his father and mother. How old is John and each of the children and his father and mother? —Exchange. Well, if the young man isn't married until the preacher gets his age figured out, Methuselah would be a kid compared to him.
