

THE CONCORD TIMES.

JOHN B. SHERRILL, Editor and Publisher.

PUBLISHED TWICE A WEEK.

VOLUME XXXIV.

CONCORD, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1909.

$1.50 A YEAR, DUE IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 69.

OUR PURPOSE

Is to handle any business entrusted to us in such a fair and liberal manner as to make the customer's relation with this bank satisfactory and profitable.

RESOURCES, $200,000.00

CITIZENS BANK & TRUST COMPANY

CONCORD, N. C.
A. JONES YORKE, President.
M. L. MARSH, Vice President.
CHAS. B. WAGONER, Cashier.
JOHN FOX, Assistant Cashier.

Farmers' Business.

We give particular attention to the business of farmers. A checking account with a bank is a convenience no farmer should be without.

Our certificates of deposit bear 4 per cent. interest. Our commercial offices always at the disposal of our customers. We cordially invite the farmers to make this their Banking Home.

The Concord National Bank

Capital $100,000

Surplus and Undivided Profits $30,000

We extend a cordial invitation to Farmers to call and get a copy of our containing list of county officers for North Carolina and other interesting and useful information. Gotten out especially for our farmer friends. We have handed out a number, but have a few hundred still on hand. Call and get one.

FARMER'S ALMANAC for 1909

CABARRUS SAVINGS BANK

Capital $66,000.00 Surplus and Profits $40,000.00
Assets over half a million dollars.
H. I. WOODHOUSE, Pres. C. W. SWINK, Cashier.

SOUTHERN AGRICULTURIST

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE.

For 40 Years the Most Instructive and Entertaining Paper for Southern Farm Families.

50 Cents a Year. One Copy Free.

HEADQUARTERS FOR SOUTHERNERS IN NEW YORK CITY.

BROADWAY CENTRAL HOTEL
Broadway and Third Streets, New York City.

Only New York Hotel Making a Specialty of the American Plan.

RATES (American Plan, $2.50 Up.
European Plan, $1.00 Up.

Our Table is the Foundation of Our Enormous Business. Send for Comprehensive Map of New York, Free.

DAN. C. WEBB, Proprietor, of Charleston, S. C.

$5,445,869 More a Year for Tobacco Farmers

The total value of the tobacco yield for the eight Tobacco States is over $59,554,131 annually. With the same acreage the tobacco growers in these States could, by improved methods of cultivation and fertilization, undoubtedly increase the total value of the crop to $65,000,000.

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers are compounded with the utmost care, containing only such elements of plant foods as can be taken up and properly assimilated by the plant without causing injury to its quality. Years of investigation of the cultivation and fertilization of tobacco enables the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company to furnish fertilizers of superior quality for the production of this crop.

Mr. J. W. Rogers, R.F.D. No. 4, Durham, N.C., writes: "I have been using your fertilizers this year and the crops are the best looking I have ever seen—especially the tobacco crop. I have never seen any other fertilizer which acted as quickly as yours does. The leaf is large and waxy, curls bright, and I am satisfied with bringing a big price. Also, my neighbors in this district use your fertilizer with the best results."

Is there any reason why you couldn't do as well? Be sure and ask your fertilizer dealer for a copy of the 1909 Virginia-Carolina Year Book or Almanac, or write our nearest sales office and a copy will be sent you free.

Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co.

Sales Offices
Richmond, Va.
Norfolk, Va.
Columbia, S. C.
Atlanta, Ga.
Savannah, Ga.
Memphis, Tenn.

FARMERS' UNION WAREHOUSES.

Atlanta Journal.

The Farmers' Union, under the skillful administration of President Charles S. Barrett, has taken steps to bring all the warehouses established in the State by this organization under one management, and as they now number one hundred or more it can readily be seen that this movement will be a powerful factor in controlling the cotton crop and hence the price of that staple.

These warehouses are established all over the South and as soon as the consolidation in Georgia has been perfected the process will be extended to include those in other States. The management of the warehouses in each and every State will be brought under a single board of control.

The Farmers' Union has already accomplished wonders for the farmers of the South and no single feature of its work has been more wisely and intelligently directed than the establishment of these warehouses, owned and controlled by the farmers themselves. Under the system to be put into operation the planter will not be forced to sell his cotton as soon as it is gathered, but, with facilities provided for meeting his maturing obligations, he will be able to hold his cotton until he can get a satisfactory price for it. When he can choose his own time for marketing his product he will control a situation which has heretofore been intolerable and by which he was held in vassalage to the financial and industrial world.

It has been pitiful in the extreme to see the sacrifices which the cotton planters have been forced to make in the past, producing as they do the most valuable and indispensable agricultural product in the world, and yet realizing for themselves the barest profit if, indeed, they do not have to pocket a loss.

It has required intelligent and extensive co-operation to remedy existing conditions, and it is believed that these Farmers' Union warehouses have solved the problem. The future development of the plan will be awaited with the keenest interest.

TO HAIR DRESSERS.

A Splendid Hair Dressing Machine.

Every hair dresser should know about Parisian Sage, the quick-acting hair dressing that does just what this paper tells you it will do.

Parisian Sage is a most delightful and different hair dressing, a fact that will be recognized the moment it is applied to the scalp. There is not a particle of stickiness in it; it is not greasy; it has a delicate and refined odor, and is a truly invigorating tonic that will make hair grow, if the hair root still shows the least sign of life.

Try a bottle of Parisian Sage. It will brighten up the hair in two days.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by Gibson Drug Store to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and scalp itch in two weeks, or money back. It is particularly in demand by women of refinement, who desire soft, lustrous hair, that compels admiration. Price 50 cents a large bottle by Gibson Drug Store, or direct, all charges prepaid, from the American makers, the Gironx Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Craven County Put on Salary Basis.

The board of county commissioners, of Craven county after considering the matter for some days have decided to place the county officers on a salary basis.

The salary of each office will include the pay of deputies and assistants. The following basis was agreed upon: Sheriff $3,700; clerk of court, $3,000; register of deeds, $2,500; treasurer $1,000; chairman, board of county commissioners, $600; county commissioners, $4 per day while in actual session.

The Legislature will be asked to give the authority to make the change and the plan will go into effect January 1st, 1910.

ASTHMA VANISHES

So Does Croup, Hy Fever and Bronchitis.

Hyomel is a confidence creator. The first time you breathe in this powerful yet soothing antiseptic air, you will know that it has marvelous curative virtues. There is nothing disagreeable about Hyomel. It is a very pleasant and prompt remedy for catarrh, colds, asthma, croup, bronchitis, etc.

If your head is so stuffed with mucus that you can't breathe a particle of air through your nostrils, Hyomel will open them up and give relief in five minutes. Why will sensible people suffer longer, why will they who see and hawk and spit and sneeze, when Gibson Drug Store will guarantee Hyomel to cure or money back $1.00 is all Gibson Drug Store asks for a complete cure.

"I have used Hyomel for hay fever, and can pronounce it the best relief for this trouble that I ever tried or heard of. I have had this malady for years, and have doctored and used many remedies, but Hyomel is ahead of any of the others, and has my hearty endorsement."—Mrs. M. S. Martin, Cassopolis, Mich.

Sentinel (or guard)—Hail! Who comes there?

The Colonel—Fool!

Sentinel—Advance, fool, and give the countersign.

HOW LINCOLN PAID A DEBT.

Baltimore Banker Tells a Story of War Times.

A well known Baltimore banker tells the following story of Lincoln, which he says, has never been published:

"When Mrs. Lincoln came to Baltimore on her way to Washington," he said, "she arrived at Calvert Street Station with her two sons, where she was met by the president of the road, a well-known banker, and was taken in his private carriage to his home for rest and refreshment after the journey."

"A great crowd, impelled by a strong anti-Union sentiment existing in Baltimore, as well as by curiosity to see the wife and children of the new President, gathered around the house, and during the time that the family remained called for the 'Rail Splitter' and the 'Prince of Rails,' as they called the oldest boy. At times it seemed they would break into the house."

"Mrs. Lincoln seemed little concerned at the excitement. After lunch, Mrs. Lincoln and her boys were driven to Camden Station on their journey to Washington. That closed the first incident."

"Several years afterward three prisoners, Confederate soldiers, having been found inside the lines without uniforms, were court-martialed and were in Fort McHenry under sentence to be hanged the next morning."

"The night before the execution was ordered the former hostess of Mrs. Lincoln and her family were called upon and urged to go to Washington and intercede with the President for these men's lives on the ground of extenuating circumstances. The lady appeared to be a Southern woman and well known to the Government authorities as having often afforded substantial aid to her relatives and other Confederates, at first declined, but upon being urged she at last consented. With her husband and several others interested she went to Washington to find Mr. Lincoln had gone to the Soldiers' Home. They drove there had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked the woman if she were not a strong Southern sympathizer. With a woman's wit she looked him squarely in the eyes and said that all men of her blood were in the service of the Confederacy, as well as most of her friends, and that she had not hesitated to do what she could when had their cards sent to the President begging for an interview on an urgent matter. It was granted. Mr. Lincoln asked them to state the case. Having done so, he turned to the only woman in the party and asked why they had not appealed to Mr. Stanton. She said Mr. Stanton had refused to suspend the sentence for further investigation. Mr. Lincoln asked