Unique Clock For Duke of York. London, May 24.—An historic clock was chosen by the Duke of York as his wedding present from Glasgow. It was made in 1804, in the expectation that George III. would purchase it, and is nearly five feet high. In addition to showing the hour, minute, and second in the usual way, the clock shows the day of the week and month and the phases of the moon. It has a carillon of sixteen bells, and eight different changes of chimes. Every third hour, from an opening in the dial representing the place of Whitehall, the figures of George III., Queen Charlotte, and other members of the royal family appear in procession, and as the King enters a troop of Horse Guards canters around. There is no procession on Sundays, the mechanism stopping automatically on that day.

CENTRALIZED POWER FOR CONGRESS NOW MENACE TO COUNTRY

Sen. Overman Issued Warning in An Address Delivered Before Kiwanis Club Here Friday Night.

WARNS AGAINST THE BOLSHEVIKI

Says Too Many Amendments to Constitution Are Being Offered—Favors the States Keeping Rights.

An address by Senator Lee S. Overman, of Salisbury, and several vocal selections by Mr. Alan D. Prindell, of this city, were features of the meeting on Friday evening of the Kiwanis Club of Concord, held at the Y. M. C. A.

Besides Senator Overman and Mr. Prindell, the Kiwanians had as guests at the meeting, Rotarians Luther Hartwell, Bill Sherrill, Fah Huxwood, Earl W. Womble and Maury Richmond, Mr. W. H. Dewesse, of New York City, Mr. Staunton Norbrun, of New York City, and Major Will Foll, chairman of team No. 7, in charge of the program.

Mr. Alan D. Prindell, who has opened a music studio in this city, gave his hearers a splendid treat with two vocal solos, his accompaniment being rendered by Miss Nell Herring at the piano. Both solos were heartily applauded, and were greatly enjoyed by every one.

After the introduction of visitors, Major Foll introduced the speaker of the evening, Senator Lee S. Overman, who the major declared, was representing the greatest State in the Union; and this State has never in its history been so well represented in the Senate of the United States Congress as it is at present.

Senator Overman, in acknowledging the introduction, said there was one thing the Major failed to state, and that is the fact that the Senator is a fellow Kiwanian. He then presented to his audience a matter which he declared is the greatest menace which faces our great nation today. "The efforts of certain men and organizations to centralize power in the Congress," and made an urgent plea for the conservation of our constitution, which is "the foundation of our country and the cause of our liberty."

Senator Overman was especially severe in his criticism of those people who would "amend our constitution until we have none left." He pointed out that there are 71 bills to amend the constitution pending in Congress now, and warned that some of them were very dangerous, especially those which would direct the teaching of birth control and would take away certain powers of our courts.

Senator Overman was also emphatic in his denunciation of the amendment relative to regulating child labor in the United States. "If we pass an amendment stating that no children can work until they are 18, and such an amendment has been offered, we will raise a nation of idlers and loafers." Each state should be allowed to make its own laws relative to the working of children, the Senator declared, and as an example of the efficiency of this plan, he pointed out that in a senate committee last year it was admitted that North Carolina's child labor law is the finest to be found in this country.

"If we pass this amendment," said Senator Overman, "we will have short haired women and long haired men slithering in our factories and telling us how to run our business! The divine right of states to regulate matters should not be taken away by amendments, a majority of which are passed by a small number of people." The seventeenth, eighteenth and the nineteenth amendments were passed by less than 3,000 persons each, he said. This number represented about three-fourths of the members of the legislatures of the various states in the Union.

Senator Overman said that he favored one of the seventy-one amendments offered to Congress. "That is the Wadsworth amendment," he explained. "This amendment would put all future amendments up to the people, and that is who should decide them. You can't force any law created by a change in the constitution when the majority of the people do not favor the change."

Senator Overman issued a warning against bolsheviki, declaring they are attempting to gain control of Congress. "They will take the powers from our courts, once they get control," he warned, "and put everything in the hands of Congress. Power centralized in Congress is the greatest menace facing this country today."

Rights of states to regulate affairs within them is a divine right, the senator said, and he plead with his hearers to fight against any movement that tends to further break down the constitution and weaken the rights of the states to "look after their own folks under local conditions."

FARMERS TAKE PLEDGE TO "LIVE AT HOME"

As the Result of a Movement by the Extension Workers of the State College. Raleigh, N. C., May 25.—A total of 2,278 North Carolina farmers have signed the pledge. In this case the pledge is a promise to live at home and is the result of a movement inaugurated early in the year by the extension workers of the State College and State Department of Agriculture, stated Director B. W. Kilgore in announcing the total number of farmers who have agreed to carry out "certain fundamental things in successful farming in 1923."

"On February 22 most of the white school teachers of the state, through the co-operation of the State Department of Education, were requested to hold a meeting at their schoolhouses at which time blanks were distributed showing ten important things which North Carolina farmers might do towards living at home," Mr. Kilgore stated. "Only short notice was given the teachers to prepare for the meetings, but most of the blanks were distributed, and though only 2,278 farmers have agreed to carry out the suggestions of the Extension Service, it shows that North Carolina has made a start towards living at home. Of course many other farmers will take part in the movement though we will have no official record of their work. Those farmers who faithfully perform seven of the ten things asked will be given an official 'Certificate of Honor' signed by the Governor, the Superintendent of Education, and the Director of Extension."

Mr. Kilgore said the 2,278 farmers will be visited during the year by the county agents who will advise them about any problem confronting the farmers in carrying out the provisions of the pledge. Of those signing, 820 were from the Piedmont district, 489 from the Northeastern section, 464 from the Southeastern section, 398 from the central part of the state, and 107 from the mountains.

The ten provisions of the pledge are given by Director Kilgore as follows: "Raise enough corn and hay to carry me through 1924. Raise enough meat to supply my family this year. Have a 12 months in the year garden. Provide milk and butter for my family the whole year through. Keep an average of 30 hens on my farm throughout the year. Improve my orchard by setting out fruits, small fruits and berries. Work for richer lands by planting legumes and other soil improving crops. Enroll at least one of my children in club work. Adequate home convenience. Beautify my homestead."

The Southern Baptist convention has been more particular in this respect, several men of the denomination having held the office of President.
