The N. C. Railroad;

If memory serves me right the North Carolina railroad running by Concord, was completed to Charlotte about the year eighteen hundred and fifty-six. Of course the advent of a railroad always creates 'interest and enthusiasm', so when the trains first began to appear the people flocked to the station to get a night. They returned Monday evening, glimpse of the iron horse. I too, was present, and while standing on the platform, only a lad I was, the engineer, without consulting me gave a long, loud toot of his whistle and it scared me so much as a bolt of lightning from a cloudless sky. I nearly fell from the platform and for a few minutes hardly knew which one of the boys I was. This story of the two Irishmen, Pat and Mike, when they first came to America and Finally Pat said: "Begorra Mike, it is a good place for slaping," so down they went and were soon in the hands of Morpheus. Away in the silent watches of the night the thunder of the onrushing train awoke Pat, and he exclaimed : "Up, Mike, up, quick!
