PROFESSOR WILL USE KNIFE TO MAKE AMERICANS YOUNGER

Eugene Steinhach is soon sailing for New York to "regenerate aged America." Prof. Steinhach is the surgeon of whom enthusiastic medical disciples say he can, with a painless little incision with a knife, reopen the fountain of youth in aged men and revise the old wrinkles which have lived too rapidly, permitting them to once more not only dream, but realize their happier hours.

Professor Steinhach is accepting the invitation of a number of prominent American physicians to come to the United States and give demonstrations of his painless and bloodless method of restoring youth and giving back to the aged the joy of living.

He may be accompanied to America by Dr. Robert Lychtenstein, a Vienna surgeon, his chief assistant, who has promised all the operations here for Steinhach, the latter not being a surgeon.

Steinhach has no hospital or clinics, patients, and visitors unless they are newspaper men. They will find him in his private house on the edge of famous Prater park. Interviews are not received, and if you are so unfortunate as to be a newspaper man, only the recommendation of some one he knows will get you to him.

This rejuvenator of the aged is an elderly man himself with thick white hair combed straight back, and a flowing beard. He is very active and registers great irritation if newspapers are mentioned.

He fulminated against the "sensational press of the world for having fun with the subject of rejuvenation of old men who have had their day, and for the refusal of treating serious the efforts of medical scientists to restore the joy of life to the aged."

Steinhach has little sense of humor in this respect. He cannot understand the frivolity of newspapers on so serious and important a matter to every man. He is very emphatic that it is not a male beauty treatment. But he does claim that it puts new fire into old veins and rouses the heart to new hopes.

Out of an old man "capable of regeneration" Steinhach says that he can make a fresh, vigorous old man full of life and energy. Out of a prematurely aged, younger man his operation makes a regenerated young man.

Sixty is the normal limit age at which the operation is effective but a number of 70 years have been operated upon with amazing success.

TO TRY DOC KLUTZ ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Interesting Case Scheduled for the July Term at Monroe.

Monroe, July 14.—Four murder cases are scheduled for the July term of criminal court, which convenes in Monroe on Monday, July 30. Overshadowing all the others is the Klutz case, Doc Klutz, of Vance township, being charged with the murder of Mail Carrier G. W. Chambers several months ago while the latter was covering his rural route out of Matthews.

It will be remembered that Chambers was attacked about 12 o'clock and shot twice with a revolver, one shot taking effect in the head and the other in the foot.

A strong array of counsel has been employed, both for the defense and the prosecution, and a hard legal battle is expected when court convenes. Union county's three Johns, John Parker, of Charlotte; John Vann and John Sikes, of Monroe, will appear for the defense while W. B. Love, of Monroe; J. A. Lockhart, of Charlotte, and Frank Linney, United States district attorney, will assist in the prosecution. Mr. Linney taking part in the prosecution because of the fact that Chambers was in the employ of the federal government at the time he was murdered.

Another cast that is expected to attract much interest in that of Mrs. Cora Belle Klutz, charged with killing her brother, Vance Wentz, also of Vance township. It will be remembered that Mrs. Klutz was flashing what she believed to be an unloaded revolver at a family party some months ago when the weapon fired, the bullet striking her brother and killing him almost instantly.

The other two cases are of minor importance, all parties concerned being negroes. Will English, of Jackson township, is charged with the murder of Dave Parker, and Ernest Couerton is charged with beating his three months old baby's head over a stump and causing instant death.

FOR TWO WIVES TO A MAN

But Plan Offered Parliament of Czecho-Slovakia Starts Riot.

Prague Dispatch. Compulsory bigamy, proposed as a means of making up the losses in population caused by the war, caused a riot when it was debated in the Czecho-Slovakia parliament.

Mlle. Berta Kerpiskova, a woman deputy, introduced a bill to compel men to take two wives, whatever their personal inclinations might be. Heavy penalties were suggested for men who shirked their duty.

In presenting the bill, she explained that the war had weakened the Czecho-Slovakia nation and that great gaps in the population were waiting to be filled.

"How are we to do this?" she asked. "It is quite simple. Distribute the surplus women in the proportion of two to every man and the problem is solved."

Great enthusiasm in the chamber greeted Mlle. Kerpiskova's remedy. Men deplored stood on their chairs and cheered long and vigorously, but other quarters were to be heard from.

Hardly had the men's cheers subsided than there came loud and angry protests from the gallery, where the wives of the deputies were sitting.

These married women shouted indignant denials that the nation would benefit by the granting of two women to every man, and demanded that the president of the chamber call Mlle. Kerpiskova to order.

What had been merely confusion then became riotous pandemonium. Mlle. Kerpiskova, shouting above the tumult, again urged support for her bill.

"Every moment lost is a crime against humanity," she cried.

Several orators of both sexes heatedly aired their views on the subject of trying to support two wives. The speaker summed up what appeared to be the opinion of the majority when he deprecated Czecho-Slovakia taking a step that would expose her to the ridicule of the world.

"Cowards! Retrogrades!" shouted Mlle. Kerpiskova in a last despairing gesture.

The President suspended the sitting. Czecho-Slovakia, it will be recalled, is the post-war political name for Bohemia.

New Orleans Cotton Review.

New Orleans, July 15.—Up to the middle of last week the price of cotton was inclined to sag but in the last half of the week fairly strong upturns occurred, highest prices coming on the closing session. Here the new crop positions were 82 to 92 points higher than the close of the preceding week; at the lowest the list was 30 to 52 points lower than the close if the preceding week. Closing prices were 32 points down to 48 points up, net July showing a net loss at 26.05 cents a pound while the new crops were at net gains, October closing at 23.38. In the spot department middling closed net unchanged at 27.63 cents a pound, which price compared with 22.50 on the close of this week last year. Favorable opinion of weather conditions over the belt, more or less uneasiness over political conditions abroad and the continued quiet of trade were the main selling reasons, but after the middle of the week the droughts and high temperatures in the western section of the belt commenced to dominate the market. Many private reports claimed that over large areas of Texas crop was deteriorating because of lack of moisture, while many traders considered maximum day temperatures of around 100 against the best progress of the crop.
