MR. BLAIR FRANK.

David H. Blair, Internal Revenue Collector, has just made public a report covering some of the work of his department during the past year, and the very frankness of the report is causing delight among Democrats.

The Democratic national committee is delighted with the Blair report, and members of the committee have hailed it with pleasure, surprise and comment.

While reactionary republican orators and writers, the committee said, "are boasting of the economy of the republican administration, the annual report of the commissioner of internal revenue exposes the falsity of the boast with respect to the internal revenue bureau by showing that the cost of collecting revenue has increased from 53 cents on each $100 in 1920, the last year of the Wilson administration, to $1.74 for each $100 in 1923, although the amount of revenue decreased $575,705.855 in 1923 as compared with the fiscal year of 1922.

"The commissioner's figures of collection costs furnish a striking comparison to genuine democratic economy in administration with the pretense of republican economy under a reactionary regime. Here are the convincing figures: "In 1920, when the internal revenue of the government was at the peak, it cost $2,947,439 to collect $5,497,281.81.

PRAISES PIEDMONT SECTION.

"The more I see of this great Piedmont section, the more I appreciate its tremendous natural advantages as a site for textile mills and other manufacturing enterprises," declared Edwin Farnham Greene, Boston multi-millionaire, who was on a visit to Spartanburg and other Piedmont towns last week.

"I have been to this section five times since last June," continued Mr. Greene, "and the more I see of it the more it impresses me as a great potential region where manufacturing is to attain a wonderful growth and diversity. I believe that the section is going to realize some great things—things in which local men and interests, as well as those from the north, and east will figure. I want to see more and more of local ownership of mills; in fact, I hope the time will soon come when the southern plants of the Pacific Mills, the 40,000,000 corporation with which I happen to be affiliated, will be largely southern owned and when southern brains will be directing their operations."

While on a recent trip to the South Mr. Greene was honor guest at a banquet in Greenville, S. C., and during a speech made at the banquet he addressed his hearers as "fellow citizens" and through the address he often used the expression "we" and "us" with reference to South Carolina.

"I want to say gentlemen," he continued, "that I am somewhat of a southern man, that I feel very much at home down here," and then added smiling, "I guess maybe I have about as much or more southern stuff in me that some of the men within the sound of my voice."

Such men as this are not badly fooled about conditions in sections of the country in which they visit. Mr. Greene is a successful business man, and the fact that his company is spending thousands of dollars in the South today backs his utterances that the Piedmont section is the coming section of the South.

QUAKES IN JAPAN.

While the recent disaster in Japan was the most severe that the country has ever known, with the greatest damage in the history of the country, it was not the first by any means. Rev. R. H. Gowen, D. D., professor of oriental history and languages and institutions in the University of Washington, gives some interesting data concerning quakes in Japan, declaring at one place that the Japanese attribute earthquakes to the writhings of an "earthquake fish" living underground with its head in the north, where rumblings are comparatively rare, and its tail between Kyoto and Tokio, where the tremors center.

The written annals of Japan began in 645 A. D., relates Dr. Gowen and tradition tells of two earthquakes prior to that time, one in 416 A. D. and one, particularly destructive, in 569 A. D. In the period covered by writing he listed the following:

- 855 A. D. A great earthquake in Kyoto attributed to the defeat and slaughter of the Taira clan. The surface of the earth was quivering for weeks. 1596. Two great earthquakes, August 30 and September 4, across the main island, Osaka castle badly damaged, Temples and houses throughout the city fell in a moment. Seven hundred ladies of the imperial court were killed. 1664 A. D. Earthquakes shook Japan for an entire month. They were attributed to lack of virtue on the part of the emperor whose abdication was forced. 1703. Great earthquake, followed in 1707 by the great eruption of Fujiyama. Yedo castle almost destroyed and 37,000 lives lost in Yedo. A tidal wave swept away 100,000 people in three districts. 1804. Earthquake and tidal wave destroyed Shimoda. The Russian freighter Diana lost. 1855. Tokio wrecked by earthquake and fire. 104,000 people perished. 1891. Earthquake over considerable part of main island, especially severe in the north of Yipi. 1893. Earthquake and eruption in Kyushu, Kagoshima, almost buried in ashes.

PRACTICE MUST BE STOPPED.

"One of the most serious phases of the liquor traffic in the United States is the frequency with which liquor is mixed with gasoline. Even in this country where prohibition is in force, certainly to some degree at least, many serious accidents are traceable to the mixture of liquor and gasoline. The situation certainly would have been worse, we believe, if liquor could be procured in quantities in the open saloon. For this reason as well as many others, prohibition must be defended.

"If," says the Hickory Record, "the public highways of North Carolina are to be reasonably safe, there must be an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the abolition of liquor. We must not be content with prohibition for the other fellow, as was the case many years ago, but insist on it for everybody in general, and particularly those who drive automobiles."

Public opinion can keep the drunken driver off the roads all right, and it can do it quicker than any other force in the world. There are too many fools with liquor and an auto on the roads, and instead of being a menace to themselves they are a nuisance and danger to everybody they meet. There should be jail sentence and nothing else for the man who drives an auto while under the influence of liquor.

GETTING FACTS.

The Federal government has sent to the South a number of special agents to make a survey of farm conditions. These agents are to collect accurate data as to what the South is doing agriculturally, and in addition to securing data they are also making photographs which will be kept as permanent records in the Federal Agricultural department.

According to reports these photographs are wanted as evidence to prove just what the South is doing. It is claimed by some that reports of the South's progress agriculturally is not believed in some quarters. People of the west and east, it is stated, find it hard to believe that the South is actually farming along modern lines, and for this reason special agents have been sent to progressive Southern States to get actual photographs. They are to photograph growing crops, land under cultivation, live stock, machinery used on the farm and farm homes. These pictures will be undisputable evidence of the fact that the South today is farming on a sound basis.

One of these agents has been in Rowan county recently, and there he made a number of photographs. He will visit other progressive counties in the State where most modern farming methods are used and where there is an abundance of pure bred cattle. North Carolina within the past 20 years has made great strides agriculturally, and the data and pictures collected in this State will be proof enough of the State's progress.

WHAT THE RATS DESTROY.

The Charlotte News quotes Frederick Haskins as declaring that in 1910 rats in the United States destroyed $80,000,000 worth of food and other property; in 1916 the amount destroyed was $180,000,000; in 1919 it was $300,000,000 and this year rats are expected to bring about a destruction of $1,000,000,000 worth of property.

The News also finds that "rats are among the most efficient carriers of disease that have to be reckoned with. They have taken bubonic plague all over the world. Their connection with scarlet fever, with typhoid, with diphtheria, meningitis and tuberculosis is also being investigated by the authorities with the belief that they will be able to associate the rodent with the prevalence of the pestilence caused by these outbreaks. Rats are flea-infested which itself is enough to make them dirty and dangerous."

"This is one destructive agency in the world that ought to be exterminated. It is a staggering liability in the view of the economist and evidently it is also a frightful menace to health and life in the view of the scientist."

Governor Pinchot is receiving congratulations from all parts of the country as a result of his efforts in bringing the anthracite miners and operators together. The Pennsylvania Governor began his efforts to bring about peace in the anthracite district after a strike had been called on September first, and after all other agencies had been unable to bring peace. Governor Pinchot talked very plainly to both the miners and the operators, and this frankness had much to do with the success of his efforts. Governor Pinchot also gave thought to the arguments of both parties in the strike, and he asked neither side to make all of the concessions. He was able to see the side of the miners as well as the operators, and when he asked each side to make concessions he was able to get results.

ILLINOIS RESTORES COURT WHERE LINCOLN PLEADED

Where Lincoln Pleaded Cases With Robert A. Ingersoll and Others. Springfield, Ill., Sept. 12.—Restoration of the old courthouse at Metamora, Woodford county, last remaining in which Abraham Lincoln pleaded cases in the old circuit days with Adlai Stevenson and Robert Ingersoll, has just been completed.

E. S. Martin, supervising architect of Illinois, who has been studying historical spots and buildings for years, had general charge of repairing and restoring the structure, which had been changed so much that Lincoln, were he to have seen it, would not have recognized it.

The original lines of the courthouse, according to Mr. Martin, were very good. It was built on the classic model so often found in New England and Virginia—portico of four doric columns surmounted by a tower and belfry. But the building which was erected in the forties was remodelled in 1879. Two wings were added and he portico removed. The old stairway in the rear of the building had been taken out and an outside stairway constructed where the portico had been.

There was a photograph of the court house as it originally appeared, but even the memory of the old settlers failed to tell L. L. Tobias, state superintendent of construction, what the first floor plan was. He set out to discover the location himself. By carefully examining the walls, he found a place where a partition had once been. He tore up a portion of the floor, and found the hole boarded up when the stairs had been removed. What kind of a stairway it was nobody knew. Finally in the basement of a private house, covered with the dust of decades, he found portions of the old banister. From this fragmentary evidence he reconstructed the stairway as it looked when the legal giants of another age ascended it to the circuit courtroom.

THE ANNUAL FARMERS' FIELD DAY AND PICNIC

To Be Held on the Station Farm Near Willard September 13th.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 11.—Dr. Charles Dearing, superintendent in charge of the Coastal Plain branch agricultural experiment station of the Department of Agriculture and State College, has announced the program for the annual farmers' field day and picnic to be held on the station farm near Willard September 13. The events of the day will begin at 9:45 o'clock in the morning and will not come to an end until after a big dance in the Co-operative tobacco warehouse at Wallace at 9 o'clock in the evening. Music will be furnished by the "Eoli Weyler" orchestra from White Lake.

A 10 o'clock in the morning the guests will be welcomed to the Coastal experiment station by Dr. Dearing, followed by a response by the chairman, W. A. Brown, member of the State Board of Agriculture. From 10:15 to 12:30 there will be addresses by prominent agricultural leaders of North Carolina. From 12:30 until 2 p. m. an old fashioned basket picnic by family groups will be held in the large picnic grove at the station. This will be followed by half an hour of music and community singing.

The farm women attending the picnic will gather in a special meeting from 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, under the leadership of Miss Georgia Filand, Pender county home demonstration agent. At the same time the men will be conducted to the various demonstration and experiment plots by the specialists of State College and the Department of Agriculture who have this work under their charge. An inspection trip to the farm's dairy is expected to be one of the most interesting and instructive events of the day. A group of experts headed by Stanley Combs will demonstrate how to make silage and will give instructions as to the selection of good dairy animals.

Poultry work will be explained by Dr. B. F. Knapp, assisted by E. G. Wardin and others. Seed improvement, showing the work of developing seed and varieties for Southeastern North Carolina, will be explained by Dr. R. Y. Winters and A. K. Robertson. The horticultural demonstrations will be talked about by C. D. Matthews, assisted by the members of his division, and will be largely concerned with peaches, sweet and Irish potatoes. The experimental plots for soil fertility and fertilizers will be visited under the direction of W. F. Pate. Permanent pastures will be lectured on by County Agents J. E. Dodson and J. T. Lazar. There will be a field demonstration and discussion of control measures for the locust weevil under the direction of Franklin Sherman, entomologist. How to build and repair farm houses and do other farm construction work will be demonstrated by E. R. Roney. Dr. Charles Dearing will personally conduct the visitors over the large muscadine grape vineyard.

Following these visits to the field plots a meeting of the truck and berry growers of the section will be held from 4 to 5 o'clock. Dr. Dearing says he expects this year's field day and picnic to be the best in every particular ever held at the field station.

Georgia College Searches For Hero's Body in England.

London, Sept. 10.—An American institute of learning, Georgia University, has petitioned the ecclesiastical authorities for permission to do some digging in the Cranham Church, near Tipton, near Essex, to find out if the remains of General Ogledorff are there. If the body is found, the university will ask further permission to ship it across the Atlantic and place it in a shrine at the institution.

There is no doubt he was buried in the church. There is a tablet to his memory on which it is recorded that he was born in 1696 and died in 1785. An account is given also of his achievements. In June, 1732, with twenty associates, the general obtained a charter for the settlement of the Georgia colony from King George II. He was the friend of many distinguished men of his time while in England, including Boswell, Burke and Pope. The last enshrined his name in a couplet.

80,000 MAY WITNESS DEMPSEY-FIRPO BOUT IN NEW YORK, 14

Expected For Bout.

New York, Sept. 10.—When Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Luis Angilo Firpo collide in their scheduled 15 round contest at the Polo Grounds September 14, Tex Rickard, promoter of the match, expects the second largest crowd that ever witnessed a glove contest to be in attendance. The Polo Grounds, home of the New York Giants, and one of the biggest baseball plants in the country, will be converted into a massive arena, with a seating capacity of approximately 80,000. The playing field will be covered with temporary seats around the ring which will be erected in the center of the diamond.

The greatest crowd that ever saw a boxing contest gathered in the pine bowl on Bay's Thirty Acres in Jersey City, July 2, 1921, to see Dempsey defend his title against Georges Carpentier. Close to 93,000 persons were jammed into the great spaces of the bowl that day. The total receipts approximated $1,600,000.

Claims were made that this figure was exceeded at the recent Willard-Firpo fight in the Jersey City arena. Rickard estimating the attendance at 100,000, but previous figures showed the paid attendance was only 75,000 and the receipts $429,920.

The championship bout between Dempsey and Willard at Toledo on July 4, 1919, although seen by only 19,659 spectators, drew a gate of $452,522. This enormous gate was made possible because of the high price of the tickets. Ringside seats sold for $60, while the cheapest benches brought $10 each.

The bouts held in the Yankee Stadium May 12 of this year for the benefit of the New York Milk fund attracted 65,000 persons, who paid $390,000. In the principal bout Firpo knocked out Jack McAuliffe, H. Willard knocked out Floyd Johnson, and Fied Fulton lost to Jack Renault on a foul.

The first of the two contests between Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, and Lew Tendler, held at Boyle's Thirty Acres in 1922, was witnessed by 55,000 with a gate of $367,852. But all records for a lightweight championship were broken when the same men met in the Yankee Stadium two months ago. It was estimated that about 60,000 persons paid close to $400,000 to see Leonard defend his title.

The famous battle of Reno, Nev., of July 4, 1910 in which Jack Johnson, negro holder of the heavyweight title, bested Jim Jeffries into submission in 14 rounds, was witnessed by 20,000 persons. Unusually high prices swelled the gate receipts to $270,775.

The fourth of July battle between Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons, fought in the boon town of Shelby, Mont., July 4, was perhaps the biggest financial fight in the history of championship glove fights. Due to the last minute turn of events, when the guarantee due Dempsey was not forthcoming, causing rumors that the battle would not be held, the attendance was held to approximately 12,500 with estimated receipts of $201,485. Dempsey's promised share alone was more than this sum.
