OPERATIVES PRAISED.

While recently discussing the textile situation in the New England States, E. Howard Bennett, editor of the American Wool and Cotton Reporter, paid high tribute to the character of the mill operatives found in the Southern States. At ern drift of the textile industry from New England. There are a number of reasons for the drift, Mr. Bennett declared, but one of the greatest is the high qualities possessed by the operatives of the South. Speaking of labor Mr.

"In 1904-and many times since-I visited all of the important mills in the South and many of the little mills way to talk with the operatives and the younger operatives, the doffer boys and girls who were spinners. Is it possible that the native believe that the waste in a southern mill will compare with the preventable waste in an eastern mill? Do you believe that the cost of oversight over these American operatives in a southern mill will compare with the cost of oversight and superintendance in an eastern mill?"

Night Feotball Next. Baltimore, Md., Sept. 26.-John Honkins is planning night football under flood lights so brilliant as to make the field as bright as day and hopes to infield on the evening of October 27, with

Haverford as the opponents. Hopkins athletic officials believe night football both possible and practical. The concession which will install the lights claims the spectators will be able to see every play, no matter how high the ball s kicked, and that it will not even be necessary to whiten the ball,

German Government Expects Civil War. Berlin, Sept. 25-Minister of War Gessler, speaking before members of the Democratic party, said today: "Civil war is practically inevitable Every indication exists that there will be an attempt at a coup d'etat this week by either the Right or the Left, There will be much bloodshed but I can vouch for the Reichsweh remaining true to the government
