Enough Money in Peaches for England

Richmond, Aug. 30.—The Post-Dispatch has received a letter this morning from Roger A. Derby, a big peach grower of Richmond county, in which he states that his shipment of a carload of peaches recently to England was not successful. The crates that brought $250 on the New York market, brought only $3.96 on the London market—nearly eighty difference for transporting and icing them to the water. He states that "the market for finding an outlet for the overproduction of southern peaches in Europe is not bright."

MORE INTEREST NOW IN LEAGUE THAN IN YEARS

Fifth Assembly Will Open today at Geneva.—Face Many Big Problems. Geneva, Aug. 31.—Not since the peace-conference of Versailles have the people of the world shown such an interest in an international gathering as in the fifth assembly of the league of nations which will open here tomorrow to take up the most important and the most difficult questions of the world. The vast interest is made evident by messages which arriving delegates and simple citizens are bringing from scores of lands, including the United States. These messages are to the effect that the people everywhere want something real to be done.

There seems to be a feeling prevalent here that a suitable atmosphere for fashioning some binding and effective project of record among the nations has been created. Some of the delegates are of the opinion that the league of nations idea of constructive friendly co-operation between governments on international questions has been the chief force in creating this atmosphere, and they emphasize the idea that the new era of collaboration which it is hoped will follow the successful London agreement will act as a powerful impulse to other and wider pacts calculated to assure peace.

Many delegates remarked today on what is known as the "Geneva atmosphere." A modest worker in the league secretariat described it as an atmosphere where "chauvinism, excessive nationalism and loud clamors for state rights are in bad form and constitute a distinctly false note. It is believed here that the ministers of the state from virtually every country in Europe will seek particularly to provide for France and Belgium some security and guarantee that they will not again be invaded, and that they will try to devise some means to induce by a general agreement the governments of all countries to reduce their armaments, naval, land and aerial, and thus permit vast treasure to be devoted to projects of peaceful reconstruction.

Effort to Destroy Argentine Embassy

Buenos Aires, Aug. 31.—Confirmation of a report that a bomb exploded Aug. 22 in front of the Argentine embassy in Rio Janeiro was obtained today from Foreign Minister Gallardo. The bomb was detonated just as Ambassador Borna Y. Arujo was about to enter the embassy building. He was not injured.

Perfume must be drawn from the bloom on the day that it is plucked. In twenty-four hours the delicate aroma is almost gone. Many flowers are required to produce small amounts of the perfume. It takes about two tons of violet blossoms, for instance, to make about two pounds of essence of violets.

The Directors of the Y will hold a meeting on Thursday night. This is one of the most important of the year and all the directors are urged to be present.

A laugh greeted an inquiry as to whether he had gotten his world series ticket, but Mr. Coolidge replied he expected to see the first game of the series if it were played here.

Aviators Land Again on American Soil at Labrador

On Board U. S. S. Richmond, at Ice Tickle, Labrador, Aug. 31.—The American fliers, Lieut. Lowell H. Smith and Eric Nelson, came over seas today from Greenland to Labrador, closing up another long and perilous gap in their "round the world" flight. They completed the air journey from the old world to the new, speeding across that dangerous and icebound stretch of water from Iqviut to Ice Tickle, a landlocked bay behind lofty ridges, two miles north of Indian harbor.

With the American pilots were their mechanics, Lieut. John Harding, Jr., and Leslie P. Arnold, to whose unceasing labors not a little of the success of the flight is due. Ships of the American navy have unceasingly guarded this course across the strait for many days. Just five months and fourteen days after beginning their world-girdling tour the American fliers landed today in the waters of continental North America. They took the air at Iqviut at 6:29 a. m., eastern time, and arrived at Ice Tickle at 1:18 a. m., eastern time. They completed the difficult crossing of the North Atlantic, beset with mishaps and delays in the early stages, covering the last stretch of 570 miles—next to the Iceland-Greenland flight the most difficult of the entire Atlantic journey—in six hours and 49 minutes. They flew in a northwest wind which blew from 20 to 40 miles an hour and speeded their machines at times as high as 125 miles an hour.

Today the American army men brought to a successful termination the first aerial circumnavigation of the earth, excluding the North American continent. Theirs was the first westbound crossing of the Atlantic Ocean by airplane. The planes swept in from the ocean like huge gray gulls, and flying low over the broad expanse of water, circled until they dropped to their bright yellow buoys and floated lightly in the green water under the shelter of lofty ridges of rocks. This cove was chosen because of the comparatively safe landing conditions it affords and for the additional reason that it is situated on a promontory jutting towards Greenland, providing the shortest route across the arm of the Atlantic, which extends northwest into Davis strait.

On shore near where the planes were moored were a group of newspaper men from the Gibson Mill neighborhood. He moved his family from Davidson last week, where he held a position as overseer in the Davidson Cotton Mill.

THE CANDIDATES FOR PRESIDENCY ARE NOW WASTING NO EFFORT

John W. Davis on Way to Wheeling, W. Va., Where Fourth Speech of Campaign Will Be Heard.

PRESIDENT SEES LABOR LEADERS

Who Called at the White House to Get Labor Day Message From Their Chief Executive.

On Board the Davis Special Train, en route to Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 1.—John W. Davis is back in his home state today to deliver his fourth address since his nomination as the Democratic candidate for President. Just three weeks ago he was traveling through these same valleys on his way to his native town of Clarkburg to receive formal notification of his nomination and to sound the keynote of his campaign. This time he goes beyond the scenes of his boyhood days to Wheeling, to address there the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Assembly.

Mr. Davis Speaks

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 1.—Those who counsel isolation for America are "blind leaders of the blind," John W. Davis, the Democratic Presidential nominee, declared here today in a Labor Day address. Speaking before the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Assembly Mr. Davis called upon the laboring men and women of America "as those on whom the burdens of war fall with most crushing weight, to lead their fellow countrymen on this great subject, to make sure that America takes her rightful place in the councils of humanity."

Adaptation of the political and commercial policies of the nation to the new conditions in the modern world, so as to make the country secure against war, was declared by the Democratic nominee to be one of "the three great constructive duties before the American people," if labor is to hold the ground that it has gained in centuries of struggle. He urged as "the others, the preservation of the equality of opportunity and of the equality of rights."

In his treatment of the last two subjects Mr. Davis declared himself as follows: For the strengthening of the public school system, but against the proposed Federal department of education as an entry on the "fatal path of a state monopoly of education."

For ratification of the child labor amendment so that "human greed may not again close the door to education that has been opened to the others; the preservation of the equality of opportunity and of the equality of rights."

Against any "trifling with" the natural rights of freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of labor, freedom of contract, freedom of the press, and freedom in matters of religious belief and practice.

Against proposals to curb the power of the courts, to protect the weak against unwise and unjust laws. For the writing in plainer terms of the law against the use of injunction in labor disputes if that be necessary, to make the courts stay within the limitation already fixed by act of Congress.

President Sees Labor Leaders

Washington, Sept. 1.—President Coolidge's principal political engagement today was with a group of representatives of organized labor who arranged to call at the White House to hear a Labor Day message from the Executive. No other Labor Day plans for the President had been announced. The call of the labor leaders was somewhat hastily arranged, and Mr. Coolidge's prepared address sought as a declaration of the administration's attitude and policies with respect to labor, was brief.

President Speaks

Washington, Sept. 1.—President Coolidge addressing a delegation of labor representatives who called at the White House today, said that the government would continue a policy which he declared had resulted in "American wage earners living better than at any other time in our history."

"If anything is to be done by the government for the people who toil for the cause of labor which is the sum in all other causes," the President said, "it will be by continuing its efforts to provide healthful surroundings, education, reawakening of fair work, stable business prosperity, and the encouragement of religious worship."

Retiring statistics which he said "show that the American wage earner enjoys a buying power enormously greater than that of any other wage earner in the world," Mr. Coolidge declared: "We do not need to import any foreign economic idea of any foreign government."

STATE DEPARTMENT OF LEGION IS NOW IN ANNUAL MEETING

Annual Convention of Posts of North Carolina Being Held in Asheville With Many Delegates Attending

WATSON B. MILLER IS SPEAKER TODAY

Program For Two Day Session Full One and Many Features Are Offered in Addition to Business Sessions

Asheville, Sept. 1.—With approximately 3,000 delegates and visitors here for the occasion, the sixty-fifth annual convention of the American Legion and the fourth annual convention of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of North Carolina, convened this morning in a joint session preliminary to separate sessions of both organizations this afternoon and tomorrow.

The program this morning consisted of welcoming exercises before a joint membership of the two organizations, which filled the city auditorium to capacity. Wiley C. Rodman, of Washington, N. C., state commander, presided over the joint session, and following a flag ceremony only and the invocation, Mayor Cathey delivered the welcoming address. Response for the Auxiliary was made by Miss Lillian Horton, of Raleigh, and for the Legion by R. Hunter Parker, of Enfield.

The principal speaker was Watson B. Miller, of Washington, D. C., chairman of the National Rehabilitation Committee of the American Legion, who spoke at length on the work that has been done by this committee for disabled soldiers during the past year and what it hopes to accomplish in the future. This closed the joint session and then the Auxiliary went into a session in a nearby hotel, and Legion members took up discussions of business matters.

The afternoon will be devoted to a sight-seeing trip and other entertainment for Legionnaires, and also will include a visit to the United States Veterans Hospital at Oteen, where there are nearly 1,000 disabled veterans being treated. The Auxiliary program for the afternoon calls for reports from several committees and officers, after which members will join the Legionnaires for a sight-seeing trip and Oteen inspection.

Missing man Returns to Rocky Mount Home

Rocky Mount, Aug. 30.—D. J. Vick, local merchant, who disappeared last Monday night, returned to his home today. Members of his family who had asked for aid in searching for him, said he had been in West Virginia having left without notice because he wanted several days complete rest from business.

ernment. We had better stick to the American brand of government, the American brand of equality and the American brand of wages. America had better stay American.

"We have outlived all artificial privilege. We have had our revolutions and reforms. I do not favor a corporation government, a bank government, a farm government, or a labor government. I am for a common sense government by all the people according to the American policy and under the American constitution."

Turning to a discussion of his views on labor, Mr. Coolidge declared that the right of wage earners to organize, bargain collectively and negotiate through their own agents had been determined. Senator Wheeler Speaks. Boston, Sept. 1.—Proclaiming the arrival of a new political cleavage based on economic division, assailing by name his adversary candidates, and summoning the citizens of Massachusetts to what he declared was the hereditary tradition of innovating in national affairs, Senator Wheeler, of Montana, on the Boston Commons today opened his campaign as Vice Presidential candidate on the La Follette ticket.

Again and again he criticized President Coolidge whom he termed the "mythically strong, courageous, silent, watchful man who occupies the Presidential chair," and attacked Charles G. Dawes, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee, for "his gallant service in war on organized labor," while he referred to John W. Davis, Democratic candidate as "a man who would be willing it seems to cut-Coolidge Coolidge as a servant of Wall Street."

For himself, Senator Wheeler said, he would welcome a classification as radical, to help the revolt against "living under the dictatorship of a small class that controls the financial resources of the country." He asserted that the only issue of the day was that of returning the government to the representatives of the people, for, he added, the two old parties "in everything but name are now as alike as the Gold Dust twins," in their subservience to "control of a single dominant power, centering in Wall Street."

For ammunition to support his attack, the Montana Senator depended upon the record of the senatorial committee which investigated former Attorney General Daugherty, most of which was brought out by himself as prosecutor. Corruption in government, which he said had been exposed, he treated as an inevitable result of "financial control."

Declaring that the republican and Democratic parties have long since ceased to "represent distinct lines of economic thought and interest" the candidate said "they have fallen under control of a single dominant power, which uses them to further its own interests."
