A drowning person needs helpnot company. Expert life savers say that if you can't help him, you had better stay away. To be a good swimmer is one thing; to be a life saver involves something quite different. Drowning people are for the moment with almost superhuman strength. Comparative weaklings have been known to drag beneath the water with them capable swimmers much stronger than themselves.

Each day 18 people drown at America's beaches, lakes, ponds and rivers. This month will claim its toll of over 540 lives—the next 12 months their 6,500. Enough people have been drowned in this country in the last eleven years to fill the great Yale bowl. They outnumber more than two to one America's losses in action during the World. War

The tragic loss of life each year by drowning has led the local Chapter of the American Red Cross to institute one of the most far-reaching campaigns for water safety that has ever been attempted in this locality. When Waldorf Astor decided to live in England he financed the building of a hotel, which became known as the Waldorf, on the site of his old home. He engaged George C. Boldt of the Bellevue, Philadelphia, to run the hotel, which was opened in March, 1893. Several years later John Jacob Astor ordered his house razed and also built a hotel, called the Astoria, on the ground. The two hotels were jointed and opened as the Waldorf-Astoria in November, 1897.

The famous Bradley-Martin costume ball held on February 10, 1897, at the Waldorf is said to have marked the social acceptance of the hotel. Six nonths before that affair the hotel had gained much prestige through having Li Hung Chang, a distinguished Chinese statesman, as one of its guests. Prince Henry of Prussia stopped there in 1902 and after the war the Prince of Wales and the King and District Attorney, Irviu B. Tucker Queen of the Belgians were guests.
