FAMILIAR FACES WILL BE MISSING

Number of Well Known Senators and Congressmen Have Finished Terms.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 25.—Two weeks from Monday more than half a thousand Senators and Representatives will take their seats in their respective chamber in the Capitol for the opening of the Seventieth Congress.

The older members of the Senate will greatly miss Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, who voluntarily retired with the close of his term last March, after a congressional career of 30 years, during which he had served as the Democratic leader in both the House and Senate.

On the Republican side of the Senate two veterans will be missing in the persons of James W. Wadsworth of New York and Irvine L. Lenroot of Wisconsin.

Mr. Lenroot entered the Senate nine years ago after a notable career in the House. Both were defeated a year ago for re-election.

Mr. Underwood was succeeded by James J. Blaine, a former Governor of the Badger State.

Ogden L. Mills, who was prominent as a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, retired to accept the post of Undersecretary of the Treasury.

Another spectacular member of the House who went down to defeat in the last election is William D. Upshaw, who represented the Fifth Georgia district and made himself conspicuous by his vigorous defence of prohibition on every possible occasion.

Of the dozen new Senators who will take their seats, five have been previous service in the House and consequently are already known to Washington.

While most of the populace passed the day at their homes, several persons went on hunting trips and others attended the football games at Davidson, Salisbury and Chapel Hill.

Prof. Wiggers explained that an electric shock may cause death in either of two ways. Death may result from cessation of respiration or of the heart action, induced by the shock. In cases where breathing is stopped, the victim may be revived with a pulmonary or artificial respiration but science has not yet discovered a means for causing the heart to resume beating, once it has come to a standstill.
