Nagging the South.

What the southern question needs is oblivion and the healing hand of time; and no man who loves his country will thrust his party or personal ambition in the way of union and peace. The "solid north" and "solid south" for which reckless demagogues are now laboring would be a national calamity. Both should be divided; and questions of practical administration are not wanting on which such divisions are invited, involving of necessity the division of the colored vote, and thus clearing the way for the end of sectional agitation by diverting attention from the questions of the past. The truth is, that the "confederate brigadiers" now in Congress, and the people they represent, are not more to be feared than the men who impute to them the same treasonable spirit and purposes which inspired them at the outbreak of the rebellion. The attitude of both is to be deplored. It is not to be supposed that the people of the South have been entirely cured of the political and social heresies which were born of the system of slavery and led them to take up arms against their country in its defense. So complete a revolution must be the work of generations and the fruit of cultivated patience and good-will in both sections. In dealing with so vital and delicate a problem we are obliged to accept the inevitable conditions of progress, and have no right to upbraid whole communities with the great historic facts which have made them so unlike their brethren of the northern states. Without the intervention of a miracle that unlikeness can only disappear gradually and under favoring conditions. * people of the South are thoroughly tired of war. The cause which inspired her mad enterprise nearly 20 years ago has perished forever. There are doubtless malign spirits among them who are so atung by the humiliation of defeat that they would glory in another conflict; but to say that the great body of the people are plotting it, or desire it, is to play the lunatic or the demagogue. If anything can drive them into such madness it will be the policy of perpetually branding them with it, and arraigning them in the language and spirit of 1861. How can a quarrel ever come to an end, if the parties to it, after a formal settlement, make it their constant business to taunt each other with their mutual accusations? In peace or in strife, the two sections of the Union must remain under one government. They must be cemented by friendship, or held together by the bayonet. If the ashes of the past are to be constantly stirred, and parties are to be rallied on the memories of a struggle which ended more than 14 years ago, and not upon the vital issues of our polities. who can predict the day when a real union of the sections will be possible? If the north and the south are to be dealt with as two hostile camps, who can expect immigration to flow into the states which else would invite it, and thus work out their redemption through an intelligent and homogeneous population? There is but one possible way out of the dilemma of unending sectional alienation, and that is through the re-arrangement of parties on questions wholly disconnected with the settled

The sheep husbandry in the comparatively new State of Texas has grown to be immense. There was recently held at San Antonia a convention of sheep growers, numbering 181. These 181 men represented 652,000 sheep, or an average of 3,600-three thousand six hundred, to each grazier. Think of this ye farmers of North Carolina and learn n lesson of thrift wisdom. In addition to the above it was stated there 200 other sheep pastures in the State whose flooks, estimated at a smaller ratio, would number 720,000 thus giving a total of nearly 1,200,000 sheep in the possession of fewer than 400 persons. But for those who make sheep farming their exclusive business, a flock of 3,600 is a small matter. The rapidity with which a flock inpreases under such favorable conditions as are found in the South is astonishing the men of the smallest means, who embark in the industry and pursue their labor with diligence and jutelligence, become possessed of bewildering wealth within the space of a few years.

A CURE FOR WARTS .- I had a mare some years ago that had a large wart on her side where the harness rubbed and kept it sore. In summer the flies made it worse. To preyent this I put on a good daub of tar, and in a few weeks the wart was killed and disappeared. I have frequently tried it since on cattle and horses, and seldom had occasion to use a second application. The remedy is simple and effectual. Didn't Have a Pair.

The Silver Reef (Utah) Miner tells the following touching story:

Two of our sporting fraternity, whom we will call Smith and Jones, recently engaged in a game of draw poker, with a big raw-boned, green looking stranger, and, as something will happen when strangers play, the stranger found him-self looking at four queens, while Smith had four kings, and Jones calmly regarded four aces-the best hand. betting was pretty lively, and finally the stranger called for a "sight," as all his money was up, and he held four queens. Smith said, "No good; I've got four kings."

"The h-l you bave!" yelled the stranger, and let fly his right fist, about the size of a peck of walnuts plump be-tween Smith's eyes knocking him across

"What have you got?" sneered the stranger to Jones.

With a glance at that big fist, Jones hastened to reply:
"Oh, I ain't got anything, I was only bluffing," and the stranger raked in the "pot," and as he departed, muttered:
"You can't ring in any cold decks on

The Legislature of Georgia has passed a law probibiting the "speculation in futures," a species of gambling which has done much to ruin thousands while enriching the few. A few men of large moans get together, buy up at their own prices the wheat, cotton, &c., put on the market without ever handling a bushel or a pound and then speculate on their purchases, making honest buyers pay the fancy prices they ask. They corned on wheat this way a few weeks ago in Chicago and ran it up to a dollar a bushel, when not a bushel was in market nor a bushel delivered to or by them. They alone profit by it, while every one else, raiser and consumer is at their mercy.

It would be a good thing for the country if every State had such a law, applicable to transactions in products and to stocks or business enterprises such as railroads, mines &c. It would cure the spirit of gambling in business, and prevent combination of speculators from ruling the market and ruining the thousands of people who fall into their traps.

GET UP THE RELICS .- Col. L. L. Polk wishes to get up a full line of Indian relies and curiosities for exhibition in his museum. Parties having such things would aid very materially in forming an interesting collection, by sending them to him at Raleigh. He also wishes specimens of the tobacco put up by our manufacturers. He has prepared a place for that. We trust our people will contribute liberally to the museum and thus have the Piedmont region well represented in our agricultural department. This department will have a separate building at the next Fair, and it is the intention of the Commissioners to have the best display ever had. Let all aid him who can. Sand him something .- Ex.

THE WHIPPED ZULUS .- London, Ju ly 22 .- A correspondent of the Times with General Greolock's command tele graphs that eight chiefs, with their followers, have sent in their intimation that they would surrender. John Dunn's scouts reported that one of the kroals recently burned up by Lord Chelmsford was the Zulu base of operations. It is anticipated that the King will retire into the inaccessible bush It is certain that his army will refuse to follow him if he are threatening Zalu, and the King's prospects are gloomy. We have in camp 2,200 Zulus who have surrendered The power of the Zulus appears to be erumbling, and submissions are made

Forty thousand dollars was set aside by the Japaneze government for the entertainment of Gen. Grant, and a palace was especially prepared for his reception, containing all modern conveniences, the carpets, linen, equipments, &c., having been imported from France for the purpose, and a corps of French and Japaneze cooks engaged. It is not improbable, that the General will visit the battle fields of the late war in Kinsin, a western island of Japan, before returning.

Wilmington Star says that Lowrey, the widow of the once notorious Henry Berry Lowery, leader of a band of outlaws which were for a long time such a source of terror to many of the good people of Robeson county, has been turned over to the United States courts on the charge of selling liquor without a license.

OAK POISON .- Dilute sweet spirits of niter with the same quantity of cold water; apply with a white cloth every ten minutes until cured. When of a few hours' contraction it seldom requires more than one application.

Raising Geese

Why is the interest in raising geese so small? How can a poultry yard be complete without them? I raised three broods of goslings from one goose last year. The same goose laid 32 eggs last year. Goslings raised last July are hatching now. Every batch of four geese should have a gander with them. I find that when there is only one gander to six geese there are too many infertile eggs I've had only two eggs of that sort that failed to be detached by tasting, since I began keeping geese. My geese are all of a pure breedgrayish brown knuckle-billed-Chinese birds with large bodies. I consider them a profitable addition to the poultry yard. Unlike the Toulouse and white geese, they are not roamers.

A Natural Soap Mine.

On Smith's Creek, in Elko county, Nev., there is a most remarkable stratum of steatite resting horizontally in a steep bluff of volcanic matter which flanks the eastern side of Smith's Creek valley. The stratum of steatite is from three to ten feet in diameter. It is easily worked and is a veritable soap mine. In fact farmers, cattle men and sheep-herders in that region all use the natural article for washing purposes. Chemically considered this peculiar clay is a hydrated silicate of alumina, magnesia, potash and lime. When the steatite is first dug from the stratum it looks precisely like immense masses of mottled Castile soap, the mottling element being a small percentage of iron oxide. Prof. Stewart received a sample of this natural scap, prepared by a firm in Elko who have undertaken to introduce it into the market. It is similar in appearance to the castile soap sold in large bars. Nothing is added to the mineral but a trifle alkali and some scenting extracts. Its detersive qualities are as powerful as those of any manufactured soap.
