Burn the land well. My plan is o put down on my bed, about feur feet apart, what we term "skid"-poles the size of a man's arm. These are to keep the wood off the ground. When these skids are that the land is burned hard enoug, and that it is time to move his fire on further. This is the best guide I can give to the inexperienced as to the length of time the land should be burned. The best time for burning land in the latitude of North Carelina and Virginia, is from the first of January to the first of drank. March. Good, fine stable manure, f ee from seeds of any grass, outs or clover, with some good commercia! fertilizer, is P what I think best to use on plant-beds.

After burning, rake off the askes, cover the ground well with stable manure, hoe up the bed thoroughly, and make it then mix the tobacco seed, using one and a half tablespoonfuls in every twenty-five pounds of fertilizer to every one hundred square vards in the bad, and then tread in with the feet or pat with the hoe. Tobacco seed require but little covering, and if covered too deep will fail to come up.
