FOUR TIMES TO SHUT YOUR MOUTH.

When You Eat, When You Cough, When You Sleep, and When You Breathe

Shut your mouth. This advice is often given with some warmth and not in all friendship, but I assure you I am speaking as a friend. Nor am I giving advice of any other nature than physical. It is a fine investment often to "shut one's mouth," and close in that "member which no one can bridle." I have known a few pieces of violence to arise from the "open mouth and the wagging tongue." But this little article wants to warn you only of the dangers to your health from the open mouth.

Air is our most abundant and cheapest food. Air is our best friend. We need it every minute, in fact, several times in a minute. But we do not need it through the mouth. The nose is "fixed for breathing," but not the mouth. This good friend of ours may carry many enemies, and while intended to bring life only, may often bring death when admitted through the mouth. It is a hard matter for dust and disease germs to find their way to throat and lungs through the nose, but very easy when they enter by way of the mouth.

So, "shut your mouth," is good advice to breathe by, and also good advice to cough by. When you feel you just must cough, shut your mouth. If necessary, place the hand over it and press hard. If you are tempted to open your mouth when you sleep, it will pay you to tie it up with a rubber band.

By all means, and for your health's sake, shut your mouth: (1) When you breath, (2) when sleep, (3) when you cough, and (4) when you eat.

Peters Creek, Va.

Peter's Creek, Va., April 25. - Misses Jettie and Lilla Collins visited Misses Dakota and Ada Hill Sunday.

Trudy, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Jefferson, is right sick at this writing.

Misses Daisy Lawson and Taitha Jefferson called on Miss Lillie Leak Sunday afternoon.

Last year there was a big talk around Leak's School house about meat being stolen, and this year meat is so high they can't reach it, and they have gone to scratching up Mr. P. G. Jefferson's and Mr. J. R. Collins' potatoes. Guess they are not Unions, and the independents won't have them, and if the devil don't take them they are gone.

Say, Ollie Jessup, write often, your letters are real interesting.

We had a little hail storm last night, but not any damage done I think.
