

Alamance County Man Writes On Good Roads

March 11, 1913.

Editor Reporter:

Being a former citizen of Stokes county, I feel especially interested in the good road movement, which is now in progress. It seems that the people of Stokes county are just beginning to see the light. The past has been dark, but the time is at hand, when if they will only finish what they have started, they will flash a beam of light on the entire county that will make life in old Stokes worth living.

The people are awakening from a slumber of more than forty years. The first rays of dawn are shining on them. If this movement is kept up the rays of the awakening light will shine brighter on them. Mr. Oliver seems to think, "What is good enough for me, is good enough for everybody." Stokes county or any other county cannot build roads without issuing bonds and building them by taxation.

I believe that Stokes county has the worst roads in the State. Other counties are building good roads, and why can't old Stokes fall in line and follow the "Good Road Movement." Let "Excelsior," the motto of the twentieth century, be the motto of Stokes county.

Yours for good roads,
J. R. NEAL

Rev. R. W. George Speaking Against Good Roads.

Campbell Route 1, March 10. Hear that Rev. R. W. George, a minister of the Presbyterian church, and Stokes county's richest citizen, being a wealthier man even than Rev. P. Oliver by some $50,000 or $75,000, is canvassing Quaker Gap township and making speeches against the good roads bond issue. While able to pay his part of the taxes and never miss the money, Mr. George favors holding the burden of keeping up the roads on the backs of the poor class of people, who are taxed $6.00 a year each in free labor on the roads. I am surprised and pained to see this spirit which animates some of our wealthy ministers of the gospel. Is it the spirit of the Nazarene, who said "Bear ye one another's burdens?"

The New Judges and Solicitors.

Raleigh, March 14.—Governor Craig has completed his slate for the four Superior court judgeships created by the legislature act which redistricts the state and adds four additional circuits. According to gossip and well founded reports here the four men determined upon by Governor Craig are: George Rountree, of Wilmington; George Connor, of Wilson; Thos. J. Shaw, of Greensboro; Cameron of Charlotte.

All of these reported appointees are known throughout the state, and each has been prominently identified in furthering the Craig campaign. Mr. Connor served during the late assembly as speaker of the house.

While little is known as to the governor's slate for the four solicitorships, it seems certain that J. C. Bower, of Lexington, law partner of State Senator Wade Phillips, will be named for the Greensboro district. Several who were known to have been aspirants for the place have asked that their names be withdrawn since the failure of the assembly to put the office on a straight salary.
