Farmers Advised To Sell Weed At Once.

A prominent tobaccoist advises those who have tobacco yet to be marketed to avail themselves of present market conditions and sell at once. There are several millions of pounds of tobacco still in the barns and the wise planter will take advantage of present prices to wind up his crop.

Every manufacturer is now represented on the market by a buyer, but it is suggested that many may be taken off within a few weeks when their firms have completed their purchases of stock for the year. At that time there is anticipated a slight decline in prices.

Prices now, declared the tobaccoist, are if anything higher than they were before the holidays. The quality of the week on the market is not so good as before Christmas, but still the average is holding up close to former average of 16 cents. So far this season an average of 15 cents has been maintained although there is a greater quantity of low grade weed being marketed.

Another impression that has gotten abroad in the tobacco district is that the last of the week is a bad time to market the weed. Beating on this subject Col. G. E. Webb, editor of the Southern Tobacco Journal, in the issue just from the press, has this to say:

"There seems to be a growing impression that tobacco does not sell as well on the local market on Saturdays as it does other days. This is a foolish proposition and certainly misleading to the farmers. Some of our best sales have been Saturday sales. As a rule the average price paid may not be up to other days, but this is because of the winding up of the week and the placing on floors of tobaccos that are not badly wanted, but taking the same grades of offerings there is no difference on Saturday from other sale days."

Mr. Gaither C. Davis, of Winston-Salem, spent a few hours here Monday, returning to his school at Winston-Salem Tuesday.

Appalling Fire Loss In United States.

"The appalling yearly loss by fire in this country is one of the many manifestations of a spirit of wastefulness that has become an ingrained habit," declared William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, in an address on the 16th inst. before the National Fire Prevention Conference, at Philadelphia.

The task before the Conference he said, primarily is one of education. The American people, added the secretary, must be taught to open their eyes before the losses occur, instead of after. He advocated the organization of a staff of demonstrators that would be at the service of a body similar to the fire prevention conference, whose duty it would be to go about the country addressing legislatures, labor unions, civic bodies and other organizations on the general subject of wastefulness.

Trouble With Tomatoes. The past season we had very fine tomatoes until the bearing season, and then the vines wilted and died. I had the ground manured with fresh stable manure and blame that to some extent. Do not think stable manure a good fertilizer for tomatoes. I am thinking of trying a piece of land not very rich and using Peruvian guano only. What do you think is best for tomatoes? Is there any remedy for the wilt or blight? The ground I have selected for next year was in peas this year. I have always had fine success and have raised fine tomatoes of the Brimmer variety. I would like to plant varieties that resist it, taking seed to as near blight-resisting sorts as possible, and would like to know what you consider the best varieties? Bordeaux mixture is worth while? Doubtless you have a regular wilt disease which prevails all over the South. There is no remedy for it but to avoid infected soil, and breed from healthy plants where others died around them will help to get resistant varieties. This is work which the Southern Experiment stations should undertake. I know of no large tomato that is resistant. The Brimmer is a good variety. Greater Baltimore is also fine. The canners all use the Stone, and when it is well grown it is as good as any. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture is important. Not that it will check the wilt, but it will prevent the leaf blight, and keep the foliage good through till frost. I would not use stable manure heavily on tomatoes, but would use acid phosphate and potash liberally.

Congress To Pass Good Road Bill

Washington, January 26.—There is little doubt that Congress will pass the good road bill at this session, and prompt action is assured in the House by the securing of a rule from the rules committee making it the unfinished business. This will bring about its passage almost as if it had been made a rider to the postoffice bill, as was the intention at one time.
