Co-Operative Association Now Making Last Drive For Members Before Opening Of Markets.

The last call for members, marking the last opportunity to join with the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, will reach the Eastern Carolina farmers this week at 22 mass meetings to be held throughout the Eastern belt.

Kentuckians, Virginians and North Carolinians, veteran campaigners, fresh from their successful drive in South Carolina, who left 70 percent of that State's tobacco signed up with the big Cooperative, will make the final drive through Eastern Carolina.

C. E. Marvin, Kentucky stockman, tobacco grower and member of the Burley Pool, with W. D. Hill, of Halifax county, Va., will reach the growers of Apex, Fuquay Springs, Zebulon, Wendell, Bailey, Nashville, Battleboro, Scotland and Littleton this week.

Senator J. A. Brown, director of the Association from Chadbourne, will tell why hundreds of South Carolina farmers who wished to "wait and see" were begging for admission to the Marketing Association, after the first day of auction sales.

Senator Brown and E. T. Bon-durant, veteran campaigners of Virginia, are scheduled to speak at Smithfield, Pinetops and Snow Hill this week, and will address mass meetings in Ayden on Thursday, La Grange on Friday and Vanceboro Saturday.

R. J. Works, of Kentucky, a tobacco grower from the Burley District will speak to the Eastern Carolina farmers at Washington, Robersonville and Williamson, and will complete his tour with meetings at Windsor on Thursday, at Colerain and Merry Hill on Friday and Harrellsville on Saturday.

The membership books of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association will close on Tuesday, August 15th with the opening of the auction market.

TOBACCO TWICE AS HIGH AS LAST YEAR

Increase In Price Is Largely Attributed To Farmers' Co-Operative Marketing Association—Many New Members.

With the opening sales at Mullins, S. C., bringing an average of from 16 to 19 cents, according to estimates of the first day's offering, it is very generally conceded that the organization of the tobacco farmers for Co-operative Marketing has been immediately successful in boosting price of their product.

In South Carolina, as in Kentucky, the growers received double the price which was given them on last year's opening markets, and thousands of farmers who sold tobacco from five to ten cents in 1921 are now rejoicing that losses have been changed to profits. This increase is largely attributed to the Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association.

Over 3,000 new members from the South Carolina belt joined the Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association during the July campaign, according to the count of contracts made at Raleigh headquarters on August 1st. Over 600 new members joined the association on July 31, the last day of the drive in South Carolina.

The directors of the big co-operative freely predict that it will net its members higher prices than those who sell upon the auction floors can average through the season.

Telegrams reaching Raleigh headquarters from M. O. Wilson, secretary of the Association, and other officials of the organized growers who were present at the opening of the auction sales this week, state that prospects are very bright for the association members.

Mr. J. E. Dalton, of Pine Hall, was among the crowd in Danbury Monday at the meetings of the county commissioners and the Board of Education. Mr. Dalton reports that the hail damaged tobacco in his section considerably last week.
