Should Have Industries Of Our Own and Keep Our Money At Home—Present Methods Will Keep Us Poor.

An exchange writing on the subject of how few industries we have says:

"The average fellow in this section gets up at the alarm of a Connecticut clock, buttons his Chicago suspenders to Detroit overalls; puts on a pair of cow hide shoes tanned in Massachusetts; shaves with a Michigan razor sharpened on a Pennsylvania strop, and dries on a cotton towel made in New Hampshire; sits down to a Jamestown table, butters his Rochester bread, made of Minneapolis flour, with a Franklinville knife and eats Kansas City bacon and Indiana grits, fried in Omaha lard, cooked on a St. Louis stove; buys canned fruit put up in California, seasoned with Rhode Island spice; slips into a rain coat bought in Buffalo, claps on a wool hat purchased in Philadelphia, harnesses his Kentucky bay, fed on Nebraska corn, with a Vermont harness and drives out to his farm, covered with an Ohio mortgage, in a Canadian wagon. After washing down his supper with a Buffalo brew, put up in New Jersey bottles, he sits down before his fireplace built of Bradford brick and smokes his briar pipe made in Chili. Finally, he crawls into a Grand Rapids bed and is kept awake by local dogs, the only home product on the place; then he wonders why he keeps poor—why money is scarce in his community—why jobs are so hard to find."
