

COMPARISON OF JOHN AND HENRY

Why Many People Would Prefer Ford To Rockefeller For President Of the United States.

John D. Rockefeller is a generous man, and has given millions of dollars for the betterment of mankind. He is a religious man whose personal life is above reproach. But nobody has ever mentioned or thought of him as a candidate for President of the United States. Henry Ford does not believe in "charity," so called. That is, he has never given a dollar to a college, a church or a hospital, so far as our knowledge extends. He has little use for "foundations" for medical research or for anything else. And yet there is a considerable element in this country in favor of his nomination for President by the Democratic convention in 1924. We do not believe there is the remotest chance in the world for his nomination, but the fact that he has a large following for that exalted position, is significant. Now why the difference in these two men in the world? Well, the difference is that Rockefeller made his money in collusion with Wall Street; Ford made his on the outside of that famous group of financiers, and in antagonism to them. But there is another and better reason for the popular favor Ford receives but that is denied to Rockefeller. Ford gives his money to men rather than institutions. He thinks the best help he can offer to a man is self help. While he sells the lowest priced automobile in the world he pays the highest wages of any automobile manufacturer on earth. He encourages thrift in every way he can, and thousands of workmen under his plan, are now home owners and fine citizens, who otherwise would be tenants and rovers over the face of the earth, Ford is not a "tight-wad," but he gives his money in a different way from Rockefeller and a way that pleases the common people. The very fact that he builds machines for the common folks fires the public imagination. The people know he is their friend, for he has proved it in a thousand ways and they would like to have a friend of theirs in the presidency, notwithstanding he declares that "history is all bunk, anyhow," and knows much less of books than of business. Old man John D. throws his dollars down from the pinnacle of financial greatness; Henry Ford stands on the ground and scatters his money amongst his comrades who have made him rich and whom he never forgets. And these are a few of the reasons why Henry Ford has bloomed forth as a candidate while John D. could not carry a county in the union—Charity and Children.

Spraying Cotton From Aeroplanes

The boll weevil, which has cost cotton planters of the south billions of dollars and has withstood numerous onslaughts aimed at their eradication, now will be attacked from the air by army planes in a new method of warfare.

The Department of Agriculture called on the War Department for the loan of several airplanes and Tuesday three specially equipped machines were furnished.

Active work against the boll weevil will start in June at the experiment station at Tullula, La., where last year effective results were accomplished by the same method against the cotton leaf worm.

Special spraying apparatus will be attached to the planes, which will scatter poison over the fields. Agents of the Department believe this is the most practical method yet advanced for control of the boll weevil and early experiments indicate the system could be adopted with beneficial results over the entire cotton belt.

North Carolina May Have Seventh Place

At the offices of R. A. Doughton, commissioner of revenue, it was stated about $2,200,000 in income tax had been collected to date with indications that the total for the year would be near $2,800,000, a large increase over the preceding year.

In comparison with other states last year North Carolina stood eighth in the collection of federal revenue. Mr. Grissom said it was indicated today that North Carolina will move up to seventh place.
