FUTURE RURAL SCHOOL MAY OPERATE BY RADIO

Prophets of Science Say Pupils in Country Places May Even Hear College Lectures Broadcast—Farm Boy Could Go to School in His Own Home.

"Educated by radio!" That phrase will doubtless be spoken by people at future points when they refer to some public man or accomplished specialist of the day. The "radio colleges" through which pupils of rural districts and boys and girls in scattered farmsteads can obtain a most all round education, is under actual consideration by educational institutions.

Several colleges have announced within the last year that they are seriously contemplating the establishment of radio courses, especially designed for students in the country districts. Within the last three months several instances have been reported where college or high school instruction has been given by radio.

Broadcasting a Lecture at WGY, Schenectady, N. Y.

There have been radio lectures of an educational nature.

As an everyday, permanent, well-organized department of American education, this is as yet only a shining possibility. Yet, if it proves as successful as it is expected to be, country young folk, who live far away from centers of learning, who could never get to high school, much less to college, will have high school and college almost literally brought to them. The limitations of the present "little red schoolhouse" will truly be swept away. The earnest, but often inexperienced and ill-paid, country schoolteacher will be reinforced, perhaps entirely supplanted, by the best type of college professor through the wonder of the wireless. The short confines of the district school, which could only be kept open two or three months in the year in some places, will conceivably vanish.

A More Intelligent America At present radio broadcasting is a nationwide institution. But it is an institution for entertainment. It is the lyceum platform, the concert course, of the air. It is the promoter of relaxation, the brightener of leisure, and the audience are scattered from coast to coast. The broadcast station of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N. Y., has actually entertained people in San Francisco.

But to utilize radio for giving a complete "schooling" to those who otherwise would be but poorly equipped mentally will be even more fascinating, for it will move the whole world forward. A mightier America—mightier because more generally intelligent than ever before—will come to pass.

The voice of the instructor and the professor can now carry through the air to the most distant spot. It can reach the ear of the boy and girl in the little red schoolhouse of the fu-

RADIO BROADCASTING VALUABLE TO FARMER

By MAJ. GEN. J. G. HARRORD, President, Radio Corporation of America.

The value of broadcasting to any individual or community will be in proportion to the difficulty of getting the same thing by any other means. Next to saving life at sea, radio's greatest service should be to the agricultural sections of this country.

It will serve the farmer and those who live in small communities, as no other utility has been able to serve him. It is already bringing him time signals, weather reports, market reports and agricultural information. Not until agricultural extension courses, religious services, opera, entertainment and education, which are now available in the cities, are regularly brought to the farmer by radio, will it have fulfilled its mission in American agriculture.

I am sure that radio cannot fail to bring all sections of our country closer together and improve its moral, social and economic standards.

ture. That means that the professor's thought can be conveyed to the mind of that boy or girl. The spoken thought or idea will reach him as quickly as though professor and pupil were in the same classroom together.

All this implies, of course, a radio receiving set in every country and rural schoolhouse. Perhaps it will mean a set in every town hall, in every country church, as well.

College in Every Farmhouse More than that. The possibilities of radio for the farmer will unquestionably make a receiving set virtually a necessity in the farmhouse. And, think of the "radio college" that will be possible when, as a general practice, farmhouses are so equipped!

"Going to school" will then become an absolute pleasure to the farmer's boy and girl. Instead, school will go to them, and they will get the essentials of a high school training, or the fundamentals of a college education without leaving the home roof!

Notwithstanding the impossibility of visual instruction, or blackboard work, much will be possible of accomplishment. With the textbook in the pupil's hands and the instructor's voice telling him how to use the textbook, the more machinery will be provided as successfully as in any classroom, and worth while results can follow.

Thorough Training Made Possible The pupil's work, his examination papers, will perhaps be sent into the school or college by mail at stated intervals. The instructor's corrections thereon will possibly come by radio—in due time. A method will doubtless be devised for helping the backward pupils with special radio instruction. The slow learners will be asked, it may be, to "stay after school" in a new manner. The instructor will announce the names of such pupils at the beginning of an evening's lecture, requesting them to continue listening in after the usual instruction period is over.

The farther the pupil proceeds the better adapted radio may be found in education. Lectures on college subjects, higher mathematics, science, literature, agriculture, music, history, art, philosophy and many others, could certainly be very effectively broadcast by authorities. Your farmer of twenty or thirty years from now may very likely stand on a complete intellectual equality with the city business man.

And the credit will belong entirely and utterly to radio.

Frequent Headaches. "I suffered with chronic constipation that would bring on very severe headaches," says Mrs. Stephen H. Kincer, of R. F. D. 1, Cripple Creek, Va. "I tried different medicines and did not get relief. The headaches became very frequent. I heard of Theford's Black-Draught and took it for a headache, and the relief was very quick, and it was so long before I had another headache. Now I just keep the Black-Draught, and don't let myself get in that condition." Theford's Black-Draught (purely vegetable) has been found to relieve constipation, and by stimulating the action of the liver, when it is torpid, helps to drive many poisons out of your system. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, and similar troubles are given relief by its use. It is the natural way. Be careful! Try Black-Draught. Sold every where.
