Farm Work This Week and Next

I. A "Lucky Thirteen" List of Timely Jobs.

- 1. Burn out the chimneys. 2. Talk club work with the young folks. 3. Sharpen all cutting equipment. 4. Make ready for the coming pigs, calves, lambs, and colts. 5. Next winter's best layers are hatched in January and February. 6. See that the grape arbores and trellises are in good shape. 7. If you don't get the San Jose scale before warm weather, it will get your orchard before cold weather. 8. Fruit trees and vines at this winter or spring will bear a year earlier than those set next winter. 9. A certified check is a guaranteed check. Likewise, certified seed potatoes are guaranteed to be true to name, of a good strain, and reasonably free from disease. 10. Plant an early patch of early corn, if the feed supply is short, and sow oats for grain as soon as the land can be gotten ready. 11. Have a regular "grazing program" for the hogs from early spring to Christmas. Sow oats and rape in February, and sow rape again a little later. Then follow with sowings of soybeans, corn, peanuts, and velvet beans. 12. Last call for repairs on fences, buildings, gates, bridges, implements and roads, before the rush of spring work. 13. The stalls, barn lot, and yard are not the only places that need a general clean-up this winter. Ticks, lice, mites, etc., do not multiply fast in cold weather and there are but few of them to kill now. They should be destroyed at once.

II. Spraying Equipment We All Need.

For spraying an orchard of family size, such as is recommended by our state extension services, a barrel spray pump is the minimum equipment that can be expected to do effective work. Even this must have a pump of sufficient power and equipment for compressed air to force the spray solution where it must be applied to do effective work and in so fine a mist that all the parts of the foliage, limbs, blossoms, and fruit to be sprayed will be covered so completely that all pests will be reached.

For these reasons, and for the additional reason that really effective equipment is the most economical and profitable, we urge home orchardists to provide a barrel sprayer. If this is not provided, then we are inclined to believe that the home orchard will be a doubtful venture unless the varieties planted are limited to the very few frost-proof kinds like persimmons and hollies.

Home orchards are so commonly neglected that most of them have become points of infection for other orchards. Every fruit tree planted and not sprayed makes the spraying of other trees in the neighborhood a greater necessity.

A barrel equipment is a necessity for the home orchard and is a profitable investment. A complete outfit will cost about $50 and last a number of years. Here are the specifications for a barrel spray outfit, and such an outfit may be bought from well known manufacturers:—

- 1 2 1-4 inch brass cylinder pump, 1 50 gallon barrel. 2 20 foot sections high pressure hose. 2 Sets of high pressure couplings. 2 Sets brass "Sure-grip" hose clamps. 2 Galvanized spring-wire hose protectors. 2 Brass reducers—hose to nozzles. 2 Eureka nozzles for Bordeaux. 2 4 foot galvanized iron rods with rubber hand-holds and leakless shut-off. 2 Brass under-spraying attachment. 1 Pressure gauge. 2 Shut-off at pump instead of brass "Y."

III. Break the Land This Week For Spring Oats.

Corn is high priced. Moreover, an unusual combination of weather conditions has caused a shortage of hay that is now keenly felt on many farms and soon will be felt on many more. Plans both for the earliest hay crop possible and for another year's supply should be made now. Hay is one of the very easiest and cheapest crops we can grow in the South, yet we spend millions of dollars annually for hay shipped to us from the East, North, and West.

Provisions should have been made last fall for an early hay crop, one that may be harvested in May, from oats, crimson clover, red clover, vetch or meadow mixtures that mature for hay before June. If that was not done, then the best chance we have for an early supplement to hays to supply our next year's needs is from oats sowed in February or March, the time depending on where we live and the weather we have in the two above named months. Few hay crops for early harvest are safer than oats or cost so little to produce. Another advantage in getting a part of your year's supply of hay from oats is that we can follow the oats with any of several other hay crops and get as high a yield from the as we would get if the crop of oat-hay had not already been grown. The crops that may follow oats and produce their normal yield of hay are cowpeas and soybeans among the legumes and Sudan grass, sorghum, and millets among the grasses.

The best yields from oats, however, cannot be secured if we do not give more care to the preparation of the seedbed. If the land has not been broken, then there is no farm work that is more important than to break this early hay land at the first opportunity. If this can be done in January, then break without harrowing leaving the surface rough and uneven so that the full benefit of freezes may be had. One good freeze is equal to the effects of disking and harrowing, and costs us nothing.

Having plowed the land well in advance of the usual spring out-sowing date for our locality, then, when that date arrives, we should disk and harrow the land until a good seed-bed has been made and sow the oats with a drill set to put down two bushels to the acre on medium land and three bushels per acre on fertile land.

IV. Order Seed and Fertilizer For Oats.

Sow Fulghum, Applor, or Red Rust-proof if the seeding is done in January or February, and Burt (Ninety-day) if for any reason we are unable to get them in the ground before the first of March.

It will pay to fertilize spring oats more than most of us realize, and will pay for two reasons—(1) because the fertilizer will increase the yield of oats profitably, and (2) because the fertilizer applied for the oats will insure a better yield from the crop that follows the oats. Oats sowed in late February will be ready for harvest for hay in 90 to 105 days.

A good fertilizer for oats on clay land should analyze 8 to 10 per cent phosphoric acid and 3 to 4 per cent nitrogen. On clay land, use no potash unless it is known to be deficient in potash. On sandy land, the fertilizer may carry the same analysis of phosphoric acid and nitrogen and in addition should also contain from 2 to 4 per cent potash. Apply 300 to 500 pounds per acre. Two or three weeks before the oats show signs of beginning to head, apply 100 pounds nitrate of soda per acre.

Unless the seed are known to be free of smut, do not fail to treat them for smut, preferably with the formalin treatment—one-half pint to 10 gallons of water for about 40 bushels of seed.

Don't delay preparing the land for oats. Be sure to prepare well and sow seed early, not feed oats, plowing your seed and fertilizer orders now. You can't beat oats for an early hay crop.

V. A Few More Reminders.

Plans for a tool and implement house will be sent you free if you ask the farm engineering division of your state extension service for them. They will also send barn, poultry house, silo, potato curing house, or other farm building plans, if you ask for them.

Have you ordered baby chicks? Chicks ordered now will not only give you a purebred flock, but a flock ready to lay next winter when eggs are worth more than at any other season of the year.

The location of farm fences and roads may affect favorably or unfavorably the whole farm plan. Let's put the fences in the right places and make them of only the best material and durably built.

There are often many woodwork jobs that can be done in the winter when there is little or no outdoor work that can be done. The first thing to do before tackling these jobs is to make a list of them and of the lumber and other construction and repair materials and tools needed. The roof, porch, floor, lattice, door tread, or kitchen and pantry shelves—anyone of these may carry a job for us. The poultry, pig, cattle, and work stock should have their winter homes set in shape. And then there is always repair work needed for tools, implements, and other equipment.—Progressive Farmer.

Tells How to End Night Coughing

To quickly stop hacking, irritating coughing at night, a very simple treatment may be had that often enables you to sleep the whole night through undisturbed almost at once.

The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful at night before retiring, and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and relieves irritation and soreness, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. So no matter whether your cough is dry and tight, or loose with much mucus, the coughing soon stops, you can usually sleep your accustomed time without a break, and the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription contains absolutely no narcotics or other harmful drugs. Instead, it merely benumbing the nerves. It actually helps the system to throw off the trouble in a perfectly natural way. Furthermore, it is very economical, the dose being only one teaspoonful. It is highly recommended for coughs, chest colds, tickling, hoarseness and bronchitis, and is wonderful for children's coughs and spasmodic croup. On sale at all good druggists. Ask for
