MOOSE OFFICIALS AT VADE MECUM

Purchasing Agent and Attorney Go There To Inspect Property With View To Building—Ready To Put Up $500,000.

Winston-Salem, Aug. 7.—That the Loyal Order of Moose is anxious to establish a school and home for younger children at Vade Mecum, Stokes county, on property of the Cicero Tise estate, is information here, following a recent visit of the attorney and purchasing agent of the organization.

If the Moose cannot get the Vade Mecum property, it is said that other sites in this section will be considered. It is understood the representatives considered Moore's Springs, White Sulphur Springs and others, but have taken no action pending some development in the Tise estate proposition.

The National Traveling Salesmen's Foundation has been negotiating for the establishment of a Traveler's Home at Vade Mecum and is said to have prior claim on the property. However, nothing new has developed in their work until recent days and the representatives of the Moose Lodge are said to have informed the trustees of the Tise estate that in the event they should be given the opportunity, they were ready to put up $500,000, or more, immediately.

Information from New York City this week was to the effect that the traveling men are starting on a determined effort to raise, by Christmas, the money needed for establishing their home and are confident they will be successful.

Plan School and Orphanage.

The Moose, it is said, are anxious to build, at Vade Mecum, a home similar to that now conducted at Moosehart, Ill., where children of Moose and their widows are accommodated. The home is said to have served a large number of persons and has proven decidedly worthwhile.

Local Moose have been advised that in the event the order can get the Vade Mecum property, a modern school will be established, where children of deceased members will be given an education. Sufficient residence accommodations will be provided, also.

The Grand Lodge has been holding its annual session at Cardiff, Wales, this week, and the matter of establishing a school and home in North Carolina is being discussed en route to and from the convention, and it was expected that a committee, with power to act, would be appointed to handle details of the proposition.

Telephone Lines Are About Up

The six or more new telephone wires being erected between Danbury and Walnut Cove are almost finished, and it is expected that service will be given over the lines at an early date. When completed this system will be one of the best in the country, it is stated.

TEACHERS HERE FROM ASHEVILLE

Starting An Intensive Literacy Campaign In Stokes and Surry Counties — State, County and Womens' Club Back It Up.

Asheville, Aug. 7.—The State Daughters of the American Revolution, the State Colonial Dames, State Club women, and the educational officials of Stokes and Surry counties have supplied funds for literacy work in those counties, and Miss Maude Worley and Miss Eva Edgerton, night school teachers and supervisors, have gone to conduct and intensive literacy campaign for four and a half months. They conferred with Mrs. Elizabeth Morris, head of the Buncombe and Asheville literacy work, here before leaving for their new duties.

The two night school teachers of Buncombe county who are serving as pioneers in literacy work in other counties of the State that are following Buncombe county in the education of adults by means of night schools, are experienced in the work, having been with Mrs. Morris in the adult work in this county for several years.

Misses Maude Worley and Eva Edgerton, Supervisors of Adult Education, are beginning an intensive literacy campaign made possible through the cooperation of the State Society of Colonial Dames, State Society of Daughters of American Revolution, eleven districts of the State Federation of Clubs and the educational officials of the two counties. The club women of both counties are giving their active support to the movement. The support of Parent-Teacher Associations, men's civic clubs, church circles and all other representative literate organizations will be earnestly sought.

This plan gives the opportunity for making a state and national contribution as well as a local one to the literacy problem.

Governor McLean has said that he will include a $50,000 or $60,000 appropriation in the budget which he will submit to the next legislature. If practical, valuable results are obtained in Stokes and Surry counties and brought to the attention of the members of the legislature, they will know, at first hand, what the appropriation can mean to the State.

Miss Edgerton and Miss Worley have been doing outstanding work in the Buncombe county community schools for the past six years. In personality, training and experience, they are splendidly equipped for this important piece of work. For their previous accomplishments they have received both state and national recognition. They have the admiration and affection of the hundreds of adult pupils whom they have helped to become wiser parents, more intelligent citizens and happier men and women.

Misses Eva Edgerton and Maude Worley, the supervisors in the adult literacy work, have arrived and are making plans to start their schools at once in Stokes.

HAILSTORM HITS TOBACCO CROP

In Germanton Section J. G. Rutledge, Will Boleyjack, W. G. Tuttle and Others Suffer Losses.

A hailstorm in the Germanton section Sunday afternoon almost completely demolished the large fine crop of tobacco on the farm of J. G. Rutledge, while the crops of Will Boleyjack, W. G. Tuttle and others were badly damaged. It was learned here that Mr. Rutledge's damage was probably $6,000. He used $247.00 worth of guano.

The storm covered an area of about three miles and was one of the most destructive ever seen in that section.

TOBACCO SELLS LOW ON BORDER

Million and a Half Pounds Change Hands In The East —Average At $12.

Wilmington, Aug. 7.—Golden leaves turned into greenbacks on the North Carolina border markets of the South Carolina or Pee Dee belt today when nearly a million and a half pounds of the weed swapped ownership.

It took a lot of leaves to make a greenback, however, for the average price on the seven markets ranged around $12 per hundred, with possibly one or two markets ranging as high as $14.

Lumberton was expected to lead in the number of pounds sold, four warehouses there being said to have handled at least half million pounds.

The "breaks" were as bad as ever seen in the belt, buyers said. The sand lugs, or primings, were dirty light to dark brown in color and without grain. The usual golden color was lacking. Warehousemen and planters attributed this to the lateness of the season, wet weather and lack of time to harvest and grade properly.

While tobacco sales were disappointing to a number of farmers in some sections, they realized the quality being offered was poor and went about preparing for better prices as the texture improves.

SCHOOL BOARD BUYS TRUCKS

To Be Used At King and Sandy Ridge Schools—Opening Dates For Schools Is Fixed.

Four more school trucks were contracted for at Monday's meeting of the Stokes Board of Education. Two of the trucks will be used at the King school, being made necessary on account of the addition of other districts to that school. At Sandy Ridge the new school building is finished and additional children will be brought into that school. The new King building will likely be ready by the opening of the fall term. The roof is now being put on the building. The King school will employ eighteen teachers.

The school board Monday fixed the opening date for the high schools for Sept. 17th, while the other schools will begin on October 1st.

TO APPOINT COUNTY WARDENS

Will Be Required To Give Whole Time To Game Law —Court Clerks Will Not Issue License Any More.

Winston-Salem, Aug. 7.—John C. Thomas, of this city, deputy game commissioner for North Carolina, has been re-appointed to the post for the next fiscal year, according to information received by The Sentinel from Wade H. Phillips, director of the State Conservation Department.

Mr. Thomas served as deputy game commissioner last year, the first year under which the department carried out the provisions of a new State-wide game conservation law, and had supervision of a district comprising the counties of Forsyth, Caswell, Rockingham, Durham, Orange, Alamance, Guilford, Stokes, Yadkin, Davie and Person.

Under new regulations promulgated by the department, Mr. Thomas will have several other counties added to his district, since the number of State deputy game commissioners has been reduced and the number of districts cut from ten to seven. He has not been appraised of the counties which will be added to his territory, but stated Monday that he expects they will be those in the extreme north-western portion of the State.

Mr. Thomas is now giving consideration to the appointment of county game wardens and will announce their names within the next few days.

County game wardens will be required to devote their full time to the administration of the law this year, Commissioner Thomas said. He said hunters would be required to comply with the law this year, since it had been in operation a year and the department had been lenient until the law became familiar.

Forsyth county led all counties in the State last year in the issuance of licenses, while Mr. Thomas' district led all districts in the State in the amount of revenue derived from the sale of licenses.

He expects to pay particular attention to game bootleggers, having started his war on them last year when he prosecuted several for selling forbidden game to public eating houses in Winston-Salem and High Point.

License for hunting will not be handled by the Forsyth Clerk of the court this coming season and the county game warden will handle all hunting licenses, it was announced from the office of the clerk Monday. The Forsyth records for last season have been closed and forwarded to the department at Raleigh.

A conference and school of instruction for all commissioners and county wardens is being planned by Director Phillips. It will be held in Raleigh early in September, before the opening of the hunting seasons. Addresses will be delivered by leading sportsmen and conservationists and an intensive course of study will be prescribed for the officials.

Gene Simpson and little daughter, Margaret, spent the week end with Mrs. John Taylor.

C., in which there were 475 professions of religion. A meeting held just previous to the one at Norwood resulted in 570 professions. The many friends of Mr. Long in this county will learn of his great success with much pleasure.

Mr. Hudspeth has invited Mr. Long to come back to Stokes to hold another revival but he writes that he will be unable to get here before next year, having already accepted invitations that will consume the remainder of this year.
