BAPTIST CHURCH IS DEDICATED

Large Attendance At Sunday Afternoon Service—Dr. Chas. Maddy Delivers Principal Sermon—Revival In Progress.

The dedication services for the new Baptist church here were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with an attendance that taxed the capacity of the church.

While Dr. Chas. Maddy, general secretary of the North Carolina Baptist Association, delivered the sermon, there were interesting addresses by Rev. Fred N. Day, Rev. O. E. Ward and other ministers and laymen. A quartette from Salem Baptist church sang several numbers at the service.

Mr. Day read the list of donors to the church and stated that it was practically paid for in full, costing almost eight thousand dollars. The church is one of the nicest in every respect in this section of the country.

In soliciting funds for the building of the church Rev. Fred N. Day visited more than a hundred churches and received gifts from practically all of them as well as from hundreds of individuals. He was practically unassisted in the work from start to finish and gave months of his time and hundreds of dollars in cash to the work.

Beginning with the Sunday night service Mr. Day started a series of revival services which will be continued for a week or ten days. The attendance is good and much interest is being manifested in the services.

Dr. John C. Small, prominent citizen of Germanton, passed away at his home Sunday morning after a lingering illness. He was aged 58 years.

Dr. Small was born at Jonesboro, February 4, 1871, and for a number of years was an engineer on the Southern Railway, residing at Spencer. In 1920, he went to Gastonia, practicing chiropractic, but for five years had been making his home in Germanton.

Dr. Small was married February 16, 1907, to Miss Ida Gertrude Hill. Surviving are his wife, two daughters, Misses Lillian and Mildred Sntal; 3 sisters, Mrs. Eugenia White, of Fayetteville; Mrs. W. H. Gibson, of Columbia, S. C., and Mrs. A. E. Smith, of Lexington.

CHILD KILLED BY TRUCK FRIDAY

Little Son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Covington, of Walnut Cove Community—Driver Held Under $1,000 Bond.

The seven year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Covington, of the Walnut Cove community, was instantly killed Friday afternoon when hit by a heavy truck.

The driver of the truck which hit the child was C. A. Warner, of High Point. He was placed under $1,000.00 bond after a preliminary hearing before justice T. H. Gerry at Walnut Cove. Warner gave bond.

At the time of the accident the child had just alighted from the school bus just opposite his home and was starting across the road when the truck came by, the little fellow being instantly killed when the wheels passed over the body.

Warner stated at preliminary hearing that he did not know the law required cars to stop before passing school busses which were taking on or discharging passengers, and it was stated that he was making fast speed when he passed bus, being unable to stop when the child ran across the road. The accident occurred on the Walnut Cove-Madison road just east of Walnut Cove.

The case will likely be heard at the May term of Stokes court.

Dr. Brown Seriously Ill At Winston-Salem

Winston-Salem, April 23.—Dr. H. A. Brown, pastor emeritus of the Baptist churches of Winston-Salem, was seriously ill at his home here today. He suffered a heart attack Sunday night, and yesterday little hope was held for his recovery. Monday night he rallied, however, and physicians stated that his condition showed slight improvement.

Dr. Brown is widely known among the Baptists of North Carolina. He served for more than 40 years as pastor of Baptist churches in Winston-Salem, the greater part of that time being spent as head of the First church. In appreciation of the efforts and untiring service, Brown Memorial church here was named for him. That church is one of the largest Baptist churches in the city.

THE NEW JONES LIQUOR LAW

$10,000 Fine and Five Years Imprisonment May Be Imposed By Judges.

Greensboro News.

The bootleggers and distillers of North Carolina may not have the interpretation of the Jones law down to a fine legal point but they are not going to split hairs over the matter. According to prohibition officials of the middle district the whisky veterans are observing increased vigilance to avoid contact with this law with pinches. Where one man formerly watched at the outpost of a liquor still, there are three today.

The $10,000 maximum fine and the five year imprisonment or both is not likely to be imposed in every instance or even in a majority of the cases but from the whisky man's point of view it allows judges dangerous privileges that might be exercised in aggravated cases.

The dispute, if any, between Levi H. Bancroft, district attorney of Wisconsin and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general, over the recently enacted Jones law and where it applies is a fight over a distinction without a difference, Greensboro lawyers and court officials believe.

It is pointed out that under this the district attorney has no discretion as to how he shall bring his indictments.

If the defendant is charged with making, selling, transporting, importing or exporting intoxicating liquors then the district attorney must present his indictment to the grand jury, charging a felony. Under the old national prohibition act, he could indict first offenders for a misdemeanor.

The discretion seems to be with the federal judges, who by the Jones act may impose penalties as stiff as imposed under old national prohibition act but for the maximum penalty may go as far as a $10,000 fine or a five-year imprisonment.

The act is short and to the point. It ends with the implication that it is the intent of congress that the judges who impose penalties thereunder shall discriminate between the slight violations and those of a more aggravated or commercial nature.

Under the old national prohibition act the maximum penalty for a first offender of selling whisky was a $500 fine. In cases of transporting, selling and manufacturing the Jones law gives judges as wide latitude extending from the present minimum to the five-year $10,000 maximum.

HERE'S WHERE OUR MONEY GOES

Guilford County Citizens Are Buying Cars At Rate Of 150 To 200 Each Week—Other Counties In Proportion.

Speaking of the rapid rate at which automobiles are being purchased by North Carolina people, a Greensboro paper has the following:

The records in the office of R. H. Wharton, register of deeds, show that between 150 and 200 automobiles are being bought in this county each week on the time-payment plan.

There was a time in Guilford and that wasn't so long ago, when the purchase of an automobile was an event to which the neighbors were summoned for advice and mayhap prayer. Today it is a thing of routine which must be disposed of just after the grapefruit and before the day's work begins.

Naturally these 150 cars, taking the minimum weekly sales, do not constitute absolutely virgin motor population. In many of these machines, the register of deeds are supplemented with some old model which is traded-in, and which after an application of polish and grease may be turned over the same day by a real live dealer. Another machine of still more ancient vintage may be swapped for this one and so ad motorandum.

The fact that most of these machines are paid for by the week or month may harrow the soul of the purchaser and cause him sleepless nights, if he has bought too heavy but it really isn't bankrupting the country, as is often pointed by those of a pessimistic turn of mind.

The dealers who sell these 150-200 machines weekly are better able when Saturday night comes to pay their grocers and landlords. Gasoline must be purchased for them and one would be surprised at how much of a thirst some new cars have. That is how the filling station operators pay their grocery bills, if they operate wisely. And other tradesmen horn in. These cars must be greased and repaired, washed and painted.

If people can buy these self-propelling vehicles and pay for them in a reasonable length of time without denying themselves or their families of things of a more essential thing than the enormous rate at which they are being bought here is perhaps a good omen.
