Simple Toys and Games May Easily be Made at Home

These are but a few of the many simple and interesting toys and games that can easily be made of pressed wood by the man or boy who can use ordinary tools.

WITH Christmas fast approaching we must think of toys and games for the children. Of course, the more elaborate and tricky toys will have to be purchased at the department stores and shops, but there are many simple and interesting kinds that can easily be made by the home craftsman by utilizing tempered pressed wood.

This is a material that has an unusually diversified range of uses. It is extensively employed in such sturdy construction as forms for monolithic concrete buildings. Again, it is used for the interior and exterior panelling of modern homes. Although tough and durable, the ease with which it is worked and the generous widths in which it comes makes it highly convenient to use in making shelves, simple furniture and a wide variety of miscellaneous articles.

In addition to its simple workability, this material is durable, moisture-resistant and pleasing in color and texture. If desired, it may be painted or waxed like natural wood. It is, in fact, entirely made of waste wood by an exploding, compressing, tempering process which gives it in its finished form certain definite advantages over comparable grades of thin wood.

Most lumber and building supply dealers have pressed wood in various grades, thicknesses and prices. The tempered kind is most suitable for the toys and games illustrated above and for most of the household uses here suggested.

In making the elephant and the ostrich use tempered pressed wood 1/4 inch thick for the body and 3/16 inch thick for legs, wings and ears. Where necessary drill holes 1/4 inch in diameter. Insert Chicago screws (which may be obtained in most stationery or hardware stores) in holes with a small washer between the body and the movable parts and the head of the screw. The edge of the figure can be smoothed by using a wood file or sandpaper. For the checkerboard use pressed wood 1/4 inch thick. Square the game board off in squares eight to a side, each square being 1 1/2 x 1 1/2 inches. This will make the board 16 inches square if a 2-inch border is allowed. Black every other square with India ink as shown.
