Clerk Superior Court

The Plight of Widows

Most of us have seen, in some individual instance, the tragic problem of men grown old without financial resources, and to subsist on the bounty relatives or public charity.

The plight of thousands of widows is equally grave. According to the U. S. Census Bureau, 32 per cent. of all the widows in this country must work for a living.

Many of the women once had fine homes. Their husbands earned good salaries, or owned prosperous businesses. But no bulwark was established against the future, and when death came to the wage-earner, there was little or nothing left for dependents.

It is an encouraging thing, going by the records of life insurance sales, that more and more men are making sure their widows may never be in that unhappy position.

A serious shortage of burley tobacco plants has been reported in Mitchell county, some of the larger growers having enough plants to set only 20 per cent. of their normal crop.

The Youth in Business

TENS of thousands of young men and women graduate from educational institutions every year. The majority of these persons seek employment in business. Unemployment among those who have been workers in the past is great. It behooves the youth who expects to find a position to plan well ahead. He should start thinking of his future work long before he leaves school. He should get some idea not only of one field but of several fields of endeavor. The best assurance of being able to obtain a job in the future is to be able to fill a number of positions acceptably.

Personality is a great asset in business, but too much has been spoken and written about personality. The youth who gets the impression that there is some special quality, termed personality, that will take the place of hard work, sincerity of purpose and determination, will likely come a cropper in the business race. Personal magnetism is a valuable quality, but few men possess this quality naturally. Alertness, patience, and eagerness to learn and to serve are qualities required of beginners in business. Do your immediate job well and forget about your personality is good advice. The super-salesman does not have a super-personality. He is usually merely a hard worker.

The Youth in Business

MANY young persons enter the business world each year poorly equipped to face the keen competition which they find on every side. It is easy to give these youngsters general advice. In fact most of those seeking positions in the business world for the first time get too much advice but not enough real aid in overcoming particular difficulties. Any intelligent youth knows that he must have some specific training before he can expect to obtain a job in an office. Few executives today have the time or inclination to teach beginners the elementary facts of business. Any concern rightly anticipates that applicants for employment will come to it at least partially trained.

We will take it for granted that the applicant for a job has some knowledge of business principles before he seeks a position. What else must he possess to obtain success in the business world? Perhaps the most important thing is the right mental attitude. Many young men are ambitious and full of enthusiasm. They want to go places in a hurry. But their ambition is purely selfish and personal, and takes the form of desiring a wage increase every few months and frequent advances in rank. They are working for themselves, not for the company. Such men must realize that they cannot go far until their viewpoint is changed. They must learn that the good of the company must be their first consideration and must come to find satisfaction in contributing to its progress rather than in their own private advancement.

Protect Summer Homes and Camps From Fire

The pleasure and profit to be gained from summer homes and camps can be transformed easily into tragedy and loss by fire. These temporary homes, by their very nature, call for greater vigilance during week-end and vacation occupancy.

The use of kerosene for lamps and stoves is a common source of fire. But if a few simple rules are observed, the danger can be greatly reduced. Fill lamps and stoves in the daylight so you can see what you are doing. Store kerosene and all other flammable liquids outside the house. Use a tank or drum that has a drip-proof faucet and keep a drip pan under the faucet. Never start or hasten a fire with kerosene or any other flammable liquid. If a portable kerosene heater is to be used, make sure it is one listed by the Underwriters' Laboratories.

Don't make improper alterations or extensions of electric wiring. Guard against overheating of stoves which are near woodwork; the usual sheet of metal attached to the woodwork is of little value in protecting against ignition. Smokepipes should not pass through walls or partitions of wood or with wood lath.

Burn accumulations of rubbish and litter in a metal incinerator. When fires are started outdoors never leave them unattended.

Because summer homes and camps usually are remote from fire departments, and since water is not always readily available, keep fire pails and pump tanks or fire extinguishers on hand and know how to use them. If there is an extinguisher in your car, that too affords valuable fire protection to the summer home as well as one the road or in the garage.

And speaking of automobiles, if you value your life, don't burn up the roads and don't burn up the countryside. Throwing lighted cigarettes and cigars out of the windows of your car as you pass along the road, may cause great loss of life and property. Use the ashtrays provided by the car manufacturer for disposing of stubs and ashes. And be sure you have plenty of ashtrays around that summer camp or cottage.

Do your part to protect your life, your property, and the great outdoors against fire.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

HERE'S a toothsome idea for those persons who have given up candy for the Lenten season. When your sweet tooth demands a piece of candy satisfy it instead with one or two delicious canned Hawaiian pineapple gems. These spoon-size pieces of luscious fruit are also ideal in-between meal bites for school children because they will satisfy hunger but will not ruin the appetite for the next meal. If you have given up desserts as well as candy during Lent try drinking a glass of canned unsweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice at the end of your meal and you'll find that you won't miss dessert. Its delicious sun-ripened flavor will appease the appetite and bring the meal to a happy end.
