Soil Building Makes Progress In Stokes

Agricultural conservation has made much progress in Stokes county during the past three years through the Triple-A program, reports J. F. Brown, county farm agent of the State College Extension Service. The program is becoming increasingly popular and last year 78.9 per cent. of the cropland in the county was in the program. This compares with 51.2 per cent. in 1936 and 72.7 per cent. in 1937.

Farmers earned 64.4 per cent. of their maximum soil-building payments in 1938, 77.1 per cent. in 1937 and 65.9 per cent. in 1936. To receive these payments they planted within their acreage allotments and carried out such valuable soil-building practices as seeding legumes and grasses; turning under green manure crops; applying ground limestone, superphosphate, and potash and terracing.

For instance, in 1936 a total of 6,460 acres of legumes and grasses were seeded in this county. In 1937 it was 6,176 acres, and in 1938 the seedings totaled 12,348 acres. Of these, 134 acres of winter legumes were seeded in 1937 and 132 acres in 1938. Green manure crops were turned under as follows: 1,855 acres in 1936, 14,078 acres in 1937 and 7,591 acres in 1938.

Applications of ground limestone totaled 112 tons in 1936, 154 tons in 1937 and 380 tons in 1938. Farmers used 4.3 tons of 16 per cent. superphosphate in 1936, 2 tons in 1937 and 19.7 tons in 1938. Six and nine-tenths tons of triple-superphosphate was used in 1937. Potash applications amounted to 1.0 ton in 1936.

Last year 111,200 feet of terraces were built. In 1937 terrace construction totaled 117,500 feet, and in 1936 it amounted to 123,400.

A Fast Squirrel

Roy Wilson tells of a squirrel that was fast, but not faster than gunpowder. He was hunting last fall and saw the animal stick its head from a hole high up on a hollow tree. Before Roy could fire, the squirrel raced 25 feet down the inside of the tree and looked out at the hunter from a lower hole. Mr. Wilson adjusted his sights to fire, but before he could pull the trigger the squirrel was looking at him again from the upper opening.

This process continued for some time, increasing in speed until finally, Mr. Wilson declares, the squirrel had his head out of both holes at the same time.

He fired and got the meat at the lower hole.
