At the solicitation of several leading business men of Durham, and because the first and second editions of the "History of Durham" have been exhausted, and being unable to supply the continued demand, I have undertaken to revise, enlarge and improve said book.

Special attention will be devoted to the Biographical Department, new and better engravings will be introduced, and the third will be, in every respect, an improvement on the first and second editions.

In the body of the history much new matter will be introduced, with fine engravings of leading places of interest.

Parties interested in the work, and wishing further information, are requested to confer with, or address the author,
