Dr. J.C. Ayer's Hair Vigor

THE FALLING LEAVES
Give Warning of Winter

As the falling of the hair falls in the autumn of life, so the falling of the hair falls in the autumn of life. It is a sign of weakness, and a warning of winter. Dr. J.C. Ayer's Hair Vigor restores the hair to its natural growth, and gives the scalp a healthy condition. It is the best remedy for all cases of falling hair, itching scalp, and dandruff. It is sold in bottles of 50 cents and $1.00.

A Song of Peace.

Glad tidings! Silence, drums!
From war and strife at last a long release,
And when, each day, the bill collector comes,
Cry "Peace! Peace! Peace!"
No more our warriors roam
The roar of musketry at last must cease,
And, when you're lectured in the shades,
Cry "Peace! Peace! Peace!"
When orators remark
Platforms political—your time to leave,
Ere you the weak and weary minutes count,
Cry "Peace! Peace! Peace!"
Cry till the hills resound!
And never let your chorused crying cease,
Till sea and air and earthquakes-shaken ground
Cry "Peace! Peace! Peace!"

Training in the Country.

It is quite common to read in the memoirs of successful business or professional men, particularly those who have been the architects of their own fortune, that they were born and bred upon a farm. It is usually assumed also that their success has been due in part to the physical strength and high state of health developed by a life of toil in the open air. This is no doubt a factor in fitting the country-bred youth for an active career in business, but it is not the most important factor.

The training which a farm lad receives, quite unconsciously, is very useful in preparing him for a successful career in business. He has to labor hard and almost unceasingly until work becomes a matter of course. He is trained to patience, for months must elapse before the results of his labor can be seen in the harvest. He is inspired by faith and hope through his experiences. The small return for his labor and the uncertainty of crops tend to make him frugal and of a saving disposition. With such training and a great store of vitality the country lad is well fitted to succeed in business or other undertakings. He may not think of any of these things, but his habits have been formed upon right lines. He is not afraid of work, but goes about it methodically; he is not impatient when the daily drudgery brings no sign of advancement, for he has become accustomed to sowing long before the day of harvest; he is hopeful and frugal and saving.

To such a man success in some degree is tolerably sure to come, for he is a good employe, and with his genius for economy he soon acquires capital, which enables him to start out for himself. City-bred young men, as well as country lads, succeed, but their environment is not as favorable to the development of industry, patience and frugality except when attention is given to their training. The boy upon a farm does not appreciate the advantages he enjoys; hence his desire or ambition to enter the larger life of the city, but he does enjoy advantages in a kind of training which, unknown to himself, prepares him for the keen competition of business life in a great city. Shakespeare humorously touches off the different aspects of life in the country when he makes Touchstone reply to an inquiry as to how he likes a shepherd's life:

Truly shepherd in respect to itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleases me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humor well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach.

There is philosophy as well as humor in this passage, for any situation of life has its advantages along with its disadvantages. The country lad, bred to daily toil, and poorly remunerated, sometimes seems to be at a disadvantage compared with the well-to-do city youth, whose every want is provided for; but it is the harvest that tells the real story of the seed time of preparation, and the harvest for the country lad may be vastly richer than for his city cousin, owing to the advantages he enjoys of training in industry, patience and frugality. It is disposed to be dissatisfied with it he should borrow some of Touchstone's philosophy, and consider its good as well as its evil aspects.

Sententious Sayings.

The wife-murderer probably gets bonquets because he is such a lady-killer.

A girl seldom objects to a young man stealing something from under her very nose.

When a woman reaches the age where she is not worth looking at she is old enough to be worth listening to.

The Best Remedy for Flu.

Mr. John Mathias, a well-known stock dealer of Pulaski, Ky., writes: "After suffering for over a week with flu, and my physician having failed to relieve me, I was advised to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and have the pleasure of stating that the half of one bottle cured me." For sale by M. E. Robinson & Co., J. H. Hill & Son, and Miller's Drug Store, Goldsboro; and J. R. Smith, Mount Olive.

ARF ON PHYSIOGNOMY.

The Bartow Philosopher Declares It Should be Studied in Schools.

Physiognomy is a real science and well worth study in the schools. We look at a stranger and form an opinion of him instantly by a casual inspection of his features, and yet we do not know whether it is his eyes or nose or mouth or chin or forehead that impressed us; we know that the eyes is the index of the soul, the spiritual emotions—and the brow is the measure of the intellect. There is the acquisitive nose and the fighting chin and the eloquent lips and the large, generous ears, but when we meet a man we have not known, we do not stop to inspect either of these features, but a glance at the whole combination makes up our verdict.

I was ruminating about this the other day while travelling from Cornington to Eatonton. A gentleman on the opposite side of the car interested me because I saw at a glance he outmeasured the average man. He was quite large in frame and his head and chest were massive. His hair and beard were thick, coarse and slightly silvered. He had on a black silk traveling cap and wore a white handkerchief carelessly thrown around his neck. He was reading a little book at his leisure with an occasional glance at the fields and farms that seemed to be flying behind us as the train sped on its winding way. I knew that he was an intelligent, cultured man, and possessed much force and vigor mentally and physically, but how did I know? "He is a preacher or a teacher or perhaps a judge, thought I, but if I could see the book that he is reading I could tell. By and by he laid the little book on the seat and walked to the rear end of the car and looked out. I too got up and took a glance at the little book. It was a history of the Vanderbilt university—my doubts were removed. I had never met Dr. Dowman, the new president of Emory college, but I was sure this was he. Without hesitation I introduced myself, and we had pleasant intercourses until we separated at Eatonton. He journeyed on to Milledgeville. I am sure that he is a gentleman and a scholar, and will make a worthy successor to Dr. Candler.

The books that a man or a woman reads are a good index not only of their profession, but of their character. I would give a nickel for a young man or a young girl who reads nothing but modern trash, and takes no pleasure in the grand old literature of the past centuries. How many college graduates, male or female, in Georgia have read Coleridge, Wordsworth, Gray, Tom Hood, Campbell, Colver, Burns, Charles Lamb, Addison, Goldsmith, Dr. Johnson or even Shakespeare? How many have shed delicious tears over Genieve and the Hermit, and Tam O'Shanter? How many can repeat a single verse of Gray's Elegy? Since the passing of Longfellow and Fitz Green Halleck and Bryant, who are our modern poets? What novelists have succeeded Dickens, Thackeray, Cooper and Hawthorne?

But I was journeying to Eatonton, old classic Eatonton, the county seat of Putnam, one of Georgia's historic counties, where many of her great men used to live. Half a century ago these great men flecked the country with their autocratic presence and their aristocratic mansions. The Shorters, Holts, Lamars, Napiers, Abercrombies, Turners, Triplets, Roids, Meriwethers, Branhams and Coopers have passed away, but the landmarks, the old mansions with their tall, fluted columns and stately groves have been well preserved. I was a guest in the spacious house where my college mate, Billy Reid, lived some fifty years ago. The hall is eighteen feet wide and the rooms twenty-five feet square. The fluted columns are three and one-half inches in diameter at the base and thirty feet high and have been standing for sixty years. Good, amiable Billy Reid! How we all loved him. But fortune did not favor him and his life was not a success. Eatonton is one of the old towns in middle Georgia that has lived and almost died several times, but is now on the upgrade and boasts of her waterworks and her electric lights and her new handsome churches. It is a town of settled trade, settled religion and settled politics.

The habits and the customs of the people have not changed much since the war. Twenty years ago there a few gentlemen of easy fortune and dignified leisure who gathered in the piazza of the hotel in the afternoon and talked over the latest news, there is another set who do the same thing now. I like these country villages and can afford to do that—that are not in a hurry to pass their lives away and are not crazy after the almighty dollar. Solomon says that "in leisure there is wisdom," and so these gentlemen become the oracles of the community. If the reverse be true and there is no wisdom where there is no leisure, Atlanta must have a population of 100,

A NATION'S DOINGS.

The News From Everywhere Gathered and Condensed.

The yellow fever has appeared at Franklin, La.

Ambassador Hay has accepted the office of Secretary of State.

The receipts of Klondike gold at the government assay office at Seattle, aggregated $2,120,000 in value.

The order suspending mail communications between the United States and Spain has been discontinued.

A mosquito bite caused the death of Miss Aslang Larsen, a professional nurse of New York, at Mystic, Conn., a few days since.

Seventeen persons were drowned a few days ago in Tennessee by a cloud burst, property destroyed and hundreds rendered homeless.

Miss Margaret Fallon, said to be one hundred and seventeen years old, was buried recently at King's Ferry, Cayuga county, N. Y.

A heavily-laden row boat was upset in the Potomac river, near Washington, by the frolic of two of its passengers, and three young men were drowned.

The Black Diamond Coal Company of Knoxville Tenn., operating mines in the Jellico district has gone into the hands of a receiver, liabilities $165,000; assets, $22,000.

The Spanish spy released from Fort McPherson fell into the hands of some half drunken soldiers and received several ugly wounds. The town authorities are now caring for him.

Rear Admiral Wm. A. Kirland commander of the Mare Island Navy Yard is dead. He was a native North Carolinian and senior officer of the Navy, having entered the service in 1850.

Last Friday near Selma Ala., Alex Walker, a negro, died from a whipping received by a party of unknown white men. The negro has been very troublesome in the neighborhood.

On August 20th the two large hotels, the National and the Windsor at Hot Springs Ark., were totally burned, together with six people. Many others were killed and injured by jumping from the buildings.

Mr. Vesuvius near Naples is again burning. The lava is flowing down its sides at the rate of four hundred yards per hour. Explosions are frequently heard in the central crater, from which can be seen smoke and flames.

Guard Charles M. Caste, of the Life-saving Station on Sullivan's Island, S. C., was drowned Saturday while attempting to save young Edward Schachte, who had ventured out beyond his depth. Schachte was saved by others.

The coal mines lockout at Pana, Ill., culminated recently in a serious shooting affray. It is reported that two non-union men fired upon a body of union men without provocation, seriously wounding one union man and slightly wounding another.

The discovery that England has made an unlimited contract with the Pwanchans Coal Company for several hundred thousand tons of coal to be shipped to her different coaling stations throughout the world has caused a sensation and confirmed the opinion that she is preparing for war.

The sloop yacht Leona, with seventeen men aboard, while anchored outside the Boston light, was run into by a barge in tow of the tug Henry Brook, and five men were swept from the deck by the heavy line. Two of the numbers were drowned, another was killed by being jammed to death between the tow line and the deck.

On the night of the 19th inst. in Sumner county, Ga., Mrs. McGarrath and her son were murdered in their beds by a negro with an ax. The deed then outraged a negro woman, tied her to a tree and terribly mutilated her, she lived long enough to tell the name of the negro. He was hunted for throughout the surrounding country, caught and lynched.

Items of War News.

General Merritt has cabled the War Department of the United States that the cable to Manila is now in working order.

A lighter with 620 soldiers on board sinks in the harbor of Santiago. No one was drowned but quite an exciting struggle for life resulted.

The Vatican asserts, despite reports to the contrary, that the recent illness of the Pope was a merely transitory indisposition from which he has entirely recovered.

General Shafter has informed the War Department that no more troops will be needed to preserve order at Santiago. Three other ship loads of Spanish soldiers left there a few days since carrying about 6,000 including officers, women and children back to Spain.

The Army in Time of Peace.

There seems to be some misconception on the part of many of those who discuss the disposition of the army after peace of the legislation under which the volunteer army was brought into being. It is argued that because enlistments are for a term of two years, the army will be retained in its present status for at least that length of time.

No such mistake would be made if the letter of the law were studied. On the contrary, the volunteer act is explicit in its declaration that immediately upon peace being secured the army must resolve itself back to its old peace basis; and, indeed, it looks as if there must be a stretching of the text to warrant the retention of so many of the volunteers as are manifestly necessary for giving adequate garrisons to our new possessions during the time that things are being straightened out.

The fourth section of the law enacted by congress and approved April 23rd declares that "the volunteer army shall be maintained only during the existence of war, or while war is imminent." There is certainly nothing in that declaration which leaves it optional with the president or anybody else. "Only during the existence of war or while war is imminent"—the latter clause, of course, designed to cover the period preceding the actual declaration of hostilities, if there should be any such period.

There is added a proviso under which it is argued, there is given authority for the retention of such of the volunteer forces as the president and war department authorities may desire. This is: "Provided that all enlistments for the volunteer army shall be for the term of two years unless sooner terminated, and that all officers and men composing said army shall have been accomplished, or on the conclusion of hostilities."

While this proviso is not altogether clear, the intent of the law-makers seems to have been to provide in as distinct terms as possible against the retention of any of the volunteers after the termination of hostilities, and there is no provision, therefore, for holding these troops to garrison the newly acquired territory or to do police duty in Cuba. If the letter of the law is obeyed, the army immediately upon the declaration of peace will resolve itself back to its peace basis of twenty-five thousand men.

It is understood to be the policy of the president to reduce the size of the army just as soon as he can conveniently do so and without waiting for the formal signing of the treaty of peace; but he will retain a force of perhaps one hundred thousand for the present, and congress will be asked to authorize the temporary increase of the standing army to that extent. Republicans have been as insistent as Democrats in their declarations against the permanent increase of the standing army, but the administration will argue the need of one hundred thousand troops, and there is little doubt that congress will accede to the legislation asked. How long such an army will be maintained is a problem for the future to determine.

Paris Exposition of 1900.

The near approach of the great exposition to be held at the French capital in 1900 is giving new impetus to the competition of the world's nations who expect to be represented on that occasion in peaceful rivalry. It would seem that the United States industries, despite ample official and tentative preparations on the part of the administration, have as yet hardly evinced sufficient activity in this direction. The commissioner-general for the United States has just issued two important pamphlets, one presenting the general classification and the other the rules and regulations of the Paris Exposition. They may serve both as a guide and incentive to our manufacturers and merchants, with a view of rendering the American exhibit worthy of a nation which has just emerged from a victorious war, whose principal results ought to redound in larger extension of our commerce and a corresponding revival of both our trade and industry at home and abroad—a gain which may be partially insured by a proper display of possibilities and resources at the coming international exposition.

Mr. Ferdinand W. Peck, commissioner-general, whose headquarters are at Chicago, states that, "owing to the limited time still available in which to select and arrange the exhibits of the United States, it is his desire that the widest possible invitation be extended to the manufacturers and producers of the country to participate in this exposition."

ALL OVER THE STATE.

A Summary of Current Events for the Past Seven Days.

The country people have long memories.

The sheriff and tax collector of Swain county J. F. King has assigned.

Referring to Governor Russell, the Charlotte Observer says, "we sincerely believe he is a lunatic."

Chas. E. Nelson, of Newbern, has been appointed storekeeper and gauger for the Fourth district.

Eight deserters of the colored volunteers at Fort Macon were captured Saturday in Newbern and sent back to the fort.

The heavy rains caused a wreck at Gastonia, of a freight train last Saturday. Three tramps were seriously injured.

The John White Camp of the Warren county Confederate Veterans held their annual meeting last Saturday. They were addressed by Col. Julian Carr who it is said made the speech of his life.

The Populist of the Sixth Judicial Convention have nominated A. J. Loftin, of Winston, for Judge and M. C. Richardson, of Clinton, for solicitor, they did not endorse the republican nominee Locke, of Wilmington, as was expected.

Ex-Congressman W. H. H. Cowles of Wilkesboro, N. C., and little son were bitten last Friday by a mad dog. They left immediately for New York to take the pasteur treatment. Col. Cowles is in command of 2nd North Carolina cavalry.

Father Worth, State Treasurer, has entered suit against the bondsman of the late Deputy Treasurer E. S. Walton of Morganton to recover the amount of loss to the State involved in the failure of the Piedmont Bank. It is the opinion at Morganton that there is no good ground for the suit.

Saturday the contract for building a dormitory for the negro deaf-mute and blind institution was awarded to J. D. Elliott, of Hickory, for $11,500. The dormitory, and also the industrial building, will be on the lot in front of the institution, which lot has for years been used as a garden.

A telegram to Lieut. Christian, the only recruiting officer of the First Regiment now in the State, instructs him to remain here until he secures 8 musicians for the regimental band. The regiment with this exception is full. Lieut. Christian has sent it 151 recruits. He says bandmen are very hard to get.—Raleigh Post.

Eighty convicts are now at work on the Raleigh and Cape Fear Railway and President John A. Mills informs Superintendent Mewborne of the penitentiary that the grading of the sixteen miles of road embraced in the present contract will be completed by September 15. The convicts are now building the bridge across Middle Creek.

The Result of Giving the Negro Office.

The following is an abstract from an article appearing a few days since in The Daily Record a paper published by a negro in Wilmington, N. C.

"Poor white men are careless in the matter of protecting their women. Especially on the farms. They are careless of their conduct toward them, and our experience among poor white people in the country teaches us that women of that race are not more particular in the matter of clandestine meetings with colored men, than are the white man with colored women. Meetings of this kind go on for some time until the woman's infatuation or the man's boldness, bring attention to them, and the man is lynched for rape. Every negro lynched is called a 'big burley, black brute,' when, in fact, many of those who have thus been dealt with had white men for their fathers, and were not only 'black' and 'burley,' but were sufficiently attractive for white girls of culture and refinement to fall in love with them, as is very well known to all."

White men what do you think of such lying, malicious slanderous article as this, coming too from the home city of Gov. Russell.
