

Just a Cough

Not worth paying attention to, you say. Perhaps you have had it for weeks. It's annoying because you have a constant desire to cough. It annoys you also because you remember that weak lungs is a family failing. At first it is a slight cough. At last it is a hemorrhage. At first it is easy to cure. At last, extremely difficult.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

quickly conquers your little hacking cough. There is no doubt about the cure now. Doubt comes from neglect.

For over half a century Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been curing colds, coughs and preventing consumption. It cures Consumption also if taken in time.

Keep one of Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Plasters over your lungs if you cough.

Should we send you a book on this subject, free?

Solitude.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you; Weep, and you weep alone. For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth, But has trouble enough of its own. Sing, and the hills will answer; Sigh, it is lost on the air. The echoes bound to a joyful sound, But shrink from voicing care. Rejoice, and men will seek you; Grieve, and they turn and go. They want full measure of all your pleasure, But they do not need your woe. Be glad, and your friends are many; Be sad, and you lose them all. There are none to decline your nectar'd wine, But alone you must drink life's gall. Feast, and your halls are crowded; Fast, and the world goes by. Succeed and give, and it helps you live, But no man can help you die. There is room in the halls of pleasure For a large and lordly train. But only one who must call it home, Through the narrow aisles of pain.

—ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Ambitions.

Ambition is sometimes treated as though it were a vice, because by an unworthy ambition the angels fell; but, as a matter of fact, ambition is one of the great moving forces of the world, and proper ambition is a great virtue. It is, after all, nothing more than a desire to advance one's self, but it takes many forms, both as to its object and as to the means employed to attain the object. The man whose ambition is wealth and who is unscrupulous respecting the means he uses to gain money may degenerate into a common thief. But the man whose ambition is success in his calling may acquire wealth in consequence of that success and may be scrupulously honest in all his actions.

The object of one's ambition is, generally speaking, a test of its quality. Some men desire knowledge irrespective of the fame or money it may bring them. They are under little temptation to employ unfair or dishonest means in the attainment of their purpose. Their ambition is honest and may be honestly pursued. Others make knowledge the means to an end. Their ambition is notoriety, or fame, or wealth, and such men are seldom scrupulous about the means they employ to accomplish their purpose. The character of these ambitions is exhibited even in the miniature world—the school room.

Some pupils work for the prizes or for class honors. They care nothing about acquiring a solid foundation of knowledge that will serve them in after years. Their sole object is to shine on commencement day. Others have a high ambition and neglect the prizes of competition. They are studious and attentive because they enjoy their school work and realize the value of training, and they think little of themselves or of their own fortunes. They want to do good work in their chosen line irrespective of the rewards therefor. If those who aim at mere prizes can win by trickery, they are content; it is the prize they are after, not the substance which it represents.

But the man with a worthy ambition could not be content to succeed except by merit. A prize would have no value in his eyes if he did not feel that he had earned it. Sometimes the prizes fall to those who have earned them without making them the object of their labors; more often they fall to those who seek them, and this may, perhaps, account for the fact often observed that prize-winners as a rule seldom do anything more than win prizes. Ambition is a most useful incentive to labor; it deserves encouragement rather than repression, but it should be a worthy ambition honorably pursued. How are we to tell whether an ambition is worthy or unworthy? A simple if not infallible test is the relation of ambition to selfishness.

If one's ambition is altogether selfish—if the desire is to win personal prizes, money, or fame, or office, it is an unworthy ambition; if the desire is to do good, to promote the public welfare, to add to the enjoyment of the world in art or literature, to advance knowledge or to alleviate suffering, the ambition is most worthy and may bring to those who follow it the prizes that of themselves are unworthy objects. To counsel any one to fling away ambition is to counsel him to abandon the incentive to earnest labor. Ambition should be encouraged, but it should be the ambition to acquire knowledge for the benefit it may confer upon humanity; the ambition to excel in art for the sake of the influence of that art upon others; the ambition to do good rather than the ambition to acquire something for one's self, as money, or fame, or official distinction. Let every one strive to attain that ambition which makes them rise above self.

ARP VISITS ATHENS.

And in Order to be Classic Bill Quotes Latin and Ruminates.

"Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illis." I am now in Athens, Ga., the classic city, and must quote some Latin to be classic too, and show that I have not forgotten my alma mater. "The times have changed and we must change with them," said the Latin poet 2,000 years ago, and this maxim is more striking now than it was then. The changes are more rapid and more radical. Old Franklin college, within whose unpretending walls I walked and studied and expanded my youthful mind, has grown to be an university and we old men are straining our minds to keep up with the new order, the widening of mental and physical training, which is now offered to our boys. Time was when we thought that Dr. Church and Professors McKay, Waddell, Leconte, Jackson, Stevens, Hull and Nahum Wood knew all that was worth knowing in this sublimary world; when there was no higher honor than to be a Phi Kappa or a Demos-thenian orator or to be chosen as a juniorator of one of these societies. Time was when to be in love with a lovely Athens girl was in itself a liberal education, for they were fair to look upon, refined in manners and fascinating in conversation. There were only a score or two of them, then, and they had the pick of 160 students, young men of the best families of Georgia and her sister states, and half a hundred new ones coming in every year. Just think of it; what a blessing to girls is the proximity of a male college or a university. But by and by there comes along a female college in the same town or city and then the boys have an equal chance.

My visits to this classic city have been few and far between. I do not suppose there is a soul living here now who was here in 1834, when I first saw the little embryo city. My parents and my brother and I stopped over night at the old Sledge hotel as we journeyed from Boston to Georgia in a carriage. We went to Boston by sea from Savannah, but came back all the way by land in a private carriage and never crossed a railroad. There was none to cross. My next visit was eleven years later, when I came to enter the sophomore class. Two miles at tandem pulled our little car from Union Point forty miles to Athens. There were common passengers below and a score of uncommon ones on top, for they were college boys, and as such, preferred to ride high just as college boys do now. With what fear and trembling we went through the examination that was to determine our fate whether we were fitted to enter or only fitted to get fitted. It was a thrilling and momentous ordeal, but we survived it. What awful majesty appeared in Dr. Church's classic features and in the quick glances of his dark and piercing eyes. He was from New England, and after he came south married a sister of our Judge Trippie, a beautiful woman and the mother of five of the most beautiful daughters ever seen in one family. They were quenees. These yankee school teachers all mated with our southern girls and didn't mind owning a few negroes any more than so many horses or cows, especially if they came with the wife's patrimony. Old Judge Warren got his that way, but it cut him off from his yankee relations. Nathaniel Beman was another distinguished yankee teacher, but whether he became a slave owner or not I have not learned.

My father was a yankee school teacher, but didn't get any slaves by marriage. He bought some, however, and that created a coolness among his northern kindred. It took those yankees a long time to acquiesce in slavery unless they came down south. Old Bill Seward tried to marry a Potomac county girl who had about a hundred, and because she wouldn't have him he went back north and raised a howl about slavery. Josiah Meigs, another Connecticut yankee and a grandson of Return Jonathan Meigs, was the first president of this college, and held his place for twelve years. I think that he, too, married a southern girl—a sister of Governor John Forsyth. Next came Moses Waddell, an educator of great renown. He married a sister of John C. Calhoun and educated him and Legare and Pettigrew and other notable men before he became president. After that he had for his pupils many of the great men of Georgia, including Stephens, Howell Cobb, Toombs, Johnson, George Pierce and the Crawfords. And there were giants in those days. Some folks say there are just as great men now, but there are so many of them that they have become common and do not attract so much attention.

The poet says, "I feel like one who treads alone some banquet hall deserted," and so I am when viewing these classic halls and meandering in the shade of these classic trees. All of my preceptors save one have passed over the river. All my col-

Reflections of a Bachelor.

A man lies to prevent trouble; a woman lies to make it.

A dowdy woman is as pleasing to a man as a mush sponge that is falling to pieces.

A woman can always tell man's failings by the amount of praise he doesn't lavish on her new spring hat.

A woman will forgive a man all kinds of brutality if he only pretends that it's because he is an ardent lover.

The most wonderful thing about a baby is the way he conceals his shame at hearing the queer sort of stuff his mother talks to him.

The ancients believed that rheumatism was the work of a demon within a man. Any one who has had an attack of sciatic or inflammatory rheumatism will agree that the infliction is demonaic enough to warrant the belief. It has never been claimed that Chamberlain's Pain Balm would cast out demons, but it will cure rheumatism, and hundreds bear testimony to the truth of this statement. One application relieves the pain, and this quick relief which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by M. E. Robinson & Bro., J. H. National Capital Matters.

WASHINGTON, May 16th, 1899.

An extra session of Congress will be called early in the fall, if public opinion does not object sufficiently to frighten Mr. McKinley out of issuing the call. That is the only reason it has not been officially announced. It has been decided upon, but Mr. McKinley wished to appear to follow a public demand, so the announcement was deferred until his friends, who are now talking extra session in every direction, could try to work up the public demand.

Ex-Senator Quay is using the Speakership contest to make votes for his admission to the Senate on the appointment of the Governor of Pennsylvania. That is why the Pennsylvania delegation is unpledged, and why there is talk of putting up a dummy Pennsylvania candidate for Speaker, who the delegation can pretend to support until Quay orders them to vote for one of the other candidates.

Great efforts are being made to have the Navy Department join in trying to persuade Admiral Dewey to come home by way of San Francisco, instead of by way of New York. A railway company has offered to furnish him without cost the finest special train that ever crossed the continent, to bring him from San Francisco to Washington. The republican politicians are not disposed to help along this idea at all. They are afraid of Dewey as it is, and they don't know what might happen if he was made the hero of a series of popular ovations in every town between San Francisco and Washington. They would much prefer his coming to New York, trusting the rest to his modesty.

Representative Payne, of New York, seems likely to fare badly in the Speakership fight. Senator Platt has promised to force him to withdraw as a candidate for Speaker in favor of Sherman, and it is understood that Henderson and Hopkins, the two leading Western candidates, have made a deal whereby their strength will be combined to nominate the strongest of the two, and the one who fails to get the Speakership shall be made the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and floor leader of the republicans, a position to which Payne was advanced after the death of Mr. Dingley, and which he would like to keep if he can't get the Speakership. Should Sherman win the chances are that he would have to promise the Chairmanship of the Committee on Ways and Means to some other state. So it looks as though Payne was bound to lose no matter who wins.

The Robert E. Lee Monument Association was organized in Washington this week for the purpose of erecting an equestrian statue of Gen. Lee upon a site overlooking Arlington, the old Lee homestead. The site has been donated to the Association, and prominent Southern women will undertake the task of securing the money to pay for the statue.

It seems that one of the ways in which our new possessions are to be Americanized is to allow them to be overflowed by Chinese coolies. The order issued several weeks ago, extending the laws and regulations governing immigration to the United States to all territory under military control, was taken to mean that Chinese coolies would be excluded from Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines. But that didn't suit those who were interested in filling those islands with Chinese and they had pulled enough with the powers that be to get an official order issued by the War Department saying that the extension order issued did not include that excluding the Chinese.

The gall of the beef contractors is second only to that of Secretary Alger. It might have been more than satisfied to be exonerated from all blame for the bad beef, which is the report of the Court of Inquiry admits was furnished the soldiers—the report declaring that the beef was all good when it left the hands of the contractors agents—but they are not; they are actually demanding the punishment of Gen. Miles, because he dared, in the interest of the men in the army, to say that the beef was unfit to eat. They are citing the action of the committee of the German Reichstag which favored a bill discriminating against American meats as proof of the injury done their business by the charges of Gen. Miles. Alger would gladly have Miles punished, but Mr. McKinley will hardly consent. He fears that Congress will tackle the beef question anyway, but hopes that a Congressional investigation may be escaped by allowing the matter to stand just where it was left by the report of the Court of Inquiry. If the talk of several indignant Senators and Representatives counts for anything, the matter will be heard from in Congress.

ALL OVER THE STATE.

A Summary of Current Events for the Past Seven Days.

The Jim Crow car law will go into effect June 1st, the date originally fixed by the Legislature.

Eight white men, all Federal prisoners, escaped from the county jail at Asheville Saturday morning about 1 o'clock.

The 15-months-old child of W. P. Bullock, in Wilson county, was scalded to death Monday, by falling into a pot of boiling water.

Lincolnton voted in favor of liquor license at the recent municipal election but defeated a proposition to establish a graded school.

The annual convention of the North Carolina Bankers' Association will be held at Raleigh June 7th to 9th. The membership is composed of 65 banks.

The Record-Times says Robert Morrow, who lived near Mooresville, died a few days ago and at the time of his death he lacked but 12 days of being 100 years old.

Will Stancil, a Mecklenburg county convict guard shot and killed Frank Rozzell, colored, an escaped convict, in Lincoln county Wednesday, while resisting arrest.

The grand lodge of Odd Fellows, in session at Raleigh last week, adjourned Thursday to meet next year at Winston. Dr. John A. Stevens, of Clinton, was elected grand master.

Calvin Wyrick, of Guilford county, was accidentally drowned in a branch near his house Tuesday. While trying to get a drink of water he had an epileptic attack and fell in the stream.

Nat Perkins, a prominent merchant of Warren Plains, Warren county, committed suicide Friday by drowning himself in a mill-pond near his residence, caused by business reverses.

The three-year-old son of Leroy Shulenburg, in Rowan county, was instantly killed by a horse, Monday. The child ran in front of the horse as it was coming out of the stable, was knocked down and its skull broken.

A severe rain and hail storm struck the Lumber Bridge section of Robeson county Monday night doing immense damage to crops. The Presbyterian church at that place, just completed, was blown down and several houses in the neighborhood were destroyed.

Two Children Kill Another.

GREENVILLE, N. C., May 16.—Mr. E. W. Pace spent a day over in Greene county this week, and on his return tells us of a horrible crime committed by some children on the plantation of Mr. T. E. Barrow. Among the colored tenants living on his place were Hilliard Anderson and Susan Harper. Anderson had a child three years old and the woman had two children aged seven and eight. Upon going out to their work they left the children together. During the absence of the parents the Harper children took sticks and beat the Anderson child to death, crushing its skull with their blows. Those who committed such an awful deed are to young to be dealt with by the law.

A New Railroad Deal.

WILMINGTON, N. C., May 13.—At an adjourned meeting of the stockholders of the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad Company held here today, a deal was perfected between that company and the Southern Railway Company, by which the Southern gets that part of the Atlantic and Yadkin road (late the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley) between Sanford and Mount Airy, the Wilmington and Weldon retaining that portion of the road between Sanford and Wilmington, including the Bennettsville branch. A stipulation in the deal is that the territory of the Southern Railway west and south-west of Greensboro, in this State, is to be open to Wilmington at the same freight rates that prevail from and to Norfolk and Richmond.

As a result of this deal most of the officers of the Atlantic and Yadkin resigned, and Col. A. B. Andrews was elected president, Mr. W. W. Finley, vice-president, Mr. F. S. Gannon, general manager, and Mr. W. H. Miller, secretary.
