Much of the happiness or unhapiness of our lives depends upon the abits we form when we are young. ud happiness comes not to those who pursue pleasure, but to those who learn to carry within themselves a cheerful and contended disposition. The pleasure-seeker must have change and excitement-he cannot content himself with a dull routine of work; but the great majority are required by force of circumstances to labor daily, and, therefore: it is the part of wisdom to learn to work cheerfully and to seek pleasure in labor. There are other pleasures to be found in life, but they will be appreciated more keenly if they have hoon corned. To realize this it is only necessary to note the zest with
