When Company Comes.

When the pies are in the pantry, And the chicken's in the pot, And the house is neat and tidy, Then the company comes not

But when the pantry shelves are empty, And a pick-up dinner waits, while the baby has the colic, Then they enter at your gates.

When the tablecloth is dirty, Stained with gravy and with squash. The lace curtains at the laundry, And the bedspreads in the wash. When you're doing the fall cleaning,

Rugs and carpets on the line, Then your husband's dear relations, Come to visit or to dine. So they eat the picked-up dinner,

And decide they cannot stay, hey "must do a little shopping," And they quickly haste away. Then they tell all the relations,

How their visit was a call; That "Jane is no wife for Reuben; She's no housekeeper at all." When they're gone you tell the baby, While you wipe your misty eyes, Baby, when we make a visit We'll not take them by surprise."

Management of Men.

It is commonly supposed that one must have an understanding of men in their various humors to successfully manage them, but some men and some women have intuitive knowledge on the subject. They are born managers. The success attendnatural or acquired; to pick out the their best efforts.
