Admit that the alternative is the ascendancy of those ideas and policies which are comprehended under the term Bryanism-even in that the two. Both cannot be equally bad. One or the other must be more for the advantage of the Republic, or, at least, less likely to be detrimental and fraught with injury to the best interests of the country. That is the question which we believe every citizen has the right and is under the obligation to deeide for himself according to the best of the judgment and his lights.

Applying this test, we have had no difficulty in reaching a conclusion in our town case. We know what manner of President Mr. McKinley has made. We do not of President Mr. Bryan may make. In event of the re-election of one there is the certainty of evil to continue, such evil as means the very existence of the Republic and the permanency of our free institutions. A Natural Lighthouse.

Stromboli, one of the Lipari islands, fronts the American people at this has constantly and usefully performed time! Nor do we admit that the case is such and so desperate as the function of a lighthouse for at least 2,000 years. Circular in outline, the island culminates in a conical shaped not to present to the people a elevation, due to past volcanic agenchoice of evils. Think what we may and say what we may, either Mr. McKinley or Bryan, in the 100 miles. During the day masses of vapor are seen issuing from a point high up the mountain side, and at sition of Providence must be elected night successive displays of red light, president of the United States for varying in duration and intensity, somewhat resemble those of the giganthe next four years. One of Forbes' Scoops. The following story illustrates the late Archibaid Forbes' eleverness in getting his news reports in ahead of his fellow correspondents: Here is a little scene: Time, near midnight, after a hard day's work. Everybody done up. "Helio, Jones," says Smith. "There's Forbes already asleep, like brass." "By Jove, yes," quoth Jones (inciplent snore from "It would take ten horses Forbes). to wake him up. I'll turn in," says Jones. "Time enough to get our stuff off tomorrow, eh?" "Right you are," responds Smith.

In ten minutes the wearled warrior scribes are dead asleep. Forbes rises cautiously, passing out like a ghost, sits him down in a hidden corner with the stump of a tallow candle, writes like a whirlwind for a couple of hours,

"Hello, lazy bones," exclaims Smith at 7 a. m., shaking the sleeper. "Time to be up, old man," adds Jones. "What are you up to?" quoth Forbes drawslly. "We are thinking of getting our stuff "The devil you are! Why hurry? Let's have another snooze. At last Smith and Jones get their stuff off and in three days discover to their bepuzzlement that they were 24 hours behindhand. Very provoking to Smith and Jones. But if Forbes which they must answer or attend to | had been the victim of the little ruse he would have been the first to laugh over it and to congratulate his suc cessful competitor.

This unique view presents itself to the traveler, however, only during the winter, for in the summer, and espe-cially during the rainy season, the Uruguay contains such immense quantities of water that both arms form one single stream, navigable even for the largest freight steamers. The fall has been known for centuries, and a description of it was published as early as 1691 by the Rev. Autonius Sepp, a missionary from Tyrol, who spent over 20 years among the Indians of Uru-
