Judge. Note.
After pause and think before you speak. You cannot prove the inner life. You cannot note the soul's dark, strife. Temptations, nor its dangers rise. Then do not judge another.

Al! me! and who should seek to be The one to judge another? Perchance a woman's fairest fame May be her sure, unskillful name. Yet slanders drapes her off in shame. Thus cruelly we judge her.

It costs so little, 'er to speak In kindness of another, Had life withheld its golden sheen, Perhaps less stainless you had been, So do not judge another. Ah! life is sad enough, 'twould seem. So kindly judge another. God help us when His face we'll see, And death reveals its mystery, If He should judge us cruelly, As oft we judge another.

Good and Bad Luck.

Amusing controversies sometimes arise over the question whether there is such a thing as luck. Those who deny the existence of chance can make out a strong case in favor of the belief that there is a cause for everything, that nothing really happens by chance. They overlook the fact, however, that so far as any one individual is concerned many things happen by chance, and it is these things beyond the control of the individual whom they affect which are called good luck or bad luck, according to the way in which they affect him. Sometimes very remote influences of which we may know nothing affect our welfare. They pursue a perfectly natural and logical course, and therefore cannot be classed as chance happenings, and yet they determine the "luck," good or bad, of individuals.

An eminent business man owes in large measure his good fortune to an accident that happened in the Alps before he was born. A young man traveling for pleasure saved the life of a young woman who had slipped upon the rocks. The chance acquaintance thus originated developed into a love affair, and the couple having married came to America. The wife's modest fortune founded a great business house, to which came a small errand boy, who, after years of faithful service, was taken into the firm. If there had been no accident, the other events would not have followed, at least it is not likely they would have followed in the same order. The errand boy who rose to a big merchant, would doubtless have flourished in some way, making a good name for himself and perhaps a fortune, but he would not have had a plain sailing life if he had not found a business ready made and an appreciative employer. This constituted his good luck, but luck was not the only factor in his prosperous career. He was not only lucky, but capable and deserving, and herein lies the only useful lesson in discussions about good and bad luck.

It is not enough to be lucky, as the saying goes; one must also be capable of taking advantage of a fortunate chance. The man who is ready is the one who transforms chance opportunity into what may be called good luck. There are things beyond any man's control which affect his career favorably or adversely, but within his control are other things with which he may compel circumstances. He can, for example, educate and train himself for high position, he can establish a reputation for zeal and probity which will suggest his name to the appointing power when such positions are to be filled. He can cultivate self-control so that he may neither be spoiled by good luck nor overcome by bad. In short, every man has control of some of the factors that, combined with others, make his life a success or failure. He is both lucky and deserving when opportunities fit in with character and abilities so as to help him to some degree of success. He is undeserving, not unlucky, when the occasion finds him unprepared to make use of good fortune.

The existence of such a thing as luck—good or bad—may be recognized without impairing in the least our obligation to attend carefully to all factors that make for success in life and that are within our control. We should be ready at all times to take advantage of that "tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, leads on to fortune." Fortune in this case, however, should not be taken as meaning mere wealth, but fortune of any kind—knowledge, power, a good name, anything which tends to ennoble man by making him more serviceable to his fellow-men.

Baseball has been substituted for bull fighting in Cuba. On the theory, no doubt, that it is more human to kill umpires than bulls.

A Good Cough Medicine.
Many thousands have been restored to health and happiness by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. If afflicted with any throat or lung trouble, give it a trial for it is certain to prove beneficial. Coughs that have resisted all other treatment for years, have yielded to this remedy and perfect health been restored. Cases that seemed hopeless, reports failed to benefit, have been permanently cured by its use. For sale by M. E. Robinson & Bro., J. F. Miller, Drug Store, Goldsboro; J. R. Smith, Mt. Olive.

ARP QUOTES BEECHER.
Bill Has a Melting Collar and is Not at All Pleased With It.

This horrid, torrid weather reminds me of what Henry Ward Beecher said in his church one sweltering day in July. He took no text. He wiped the perspiration from his brow and looking solemnly at the large congregation, said: "It is hot to-day. It is damned hot. It is as hot as hell!" Everybody was amazed and shocked until he added, "That is the language I heard too young men use at the door of the church as I passed them. My young friends, it is not as hot as hell." Then in a low, earnest tone he pictured the torments of hell and the certain fate of the wicked until the atmosphere of the church seemed to be cool and pleasant in comparison. The ladies ceased to move their fans and everybody was still and solemn as a funeral. It was something like Jonathan Edwards at Northampton when he got his hearers so wrought up and alarmed that they groaned in fear and grasped the posts and braces to keep from sinking into hell, and another preacher in the pulpit begged Mr. Edwards to stop. "Stop, Mr. Edwards; stop now and tell them of the mercy and love of God."

What wonderful power is in the words of an eloquent, earnest man. Mr. Beecher was all of that—a gifted, eloquent man. I heard him preach twice before the war and was profoundly impressed. I looked upon him as the impersonation of the man of God. Later on, when he began his vindictive war upon the south and said that Sharp's rifles were better than Bibles for John Brown in Kansas and it was a crime to shoot at a slaveholder and miss him, I wonder at my infatuation with the man and exclaimed with Isaiah, "How are the mighty fallen." And still later when Tilton charged him with alienating and seducing his wife and it took two months to try the case and the jury two days to make up a verdict, which virtually said, "He is not guilty, but he must not do so any more." I was mortified at my own weakness in becoming his idolater and resolved to worship no man again while he lived. A great man's character cannot be made up until after he is dead.

But I was ruminating how easy it is for a young man to say damn and damn it, I'll be damned and even to take the name of God in vain. Damn is a more convenient and expressive word than dogon or damnation or blamed and it shows a defiance of the devil and a self-conceit in the man who uses it. But it is a very handy expletive and when a young man gets in the habit of using it he rarely reforms. He knows that it is not good manners, for he does not use it in the presence of ladies or preachers or his parents. Nevertheless there are some good people who think damn it without saying it. I heard a good story the other day on Colonel Livingston, our member of congress from the Atlanta district. Last summer he was sent over to West Virginia to speak and help the Democrats in their canvass.

He ventured into a pretty hot Republican town and was haranguing and electrifying a large audience, and while scolding the Republicans and this fighting administration, a soft, half-done Irish potato took him kerzup right between the eyes. It knocked off his spectacles and flattened into mush all over his classic countenance. It surprised and shocked him, of course. Recovering his glasses he wiped the sticky stuff from his face and said with excited tone, "My friends, I have been—I have been a consistent—a consistent member of the Presbyterian church—the Presbyterian church, I say for more than—more than fifty years—yes, fifty odd years, and have tried to live—tried to live in harmony with all men—with all men, but if the dirty, doggoned, dabbled puppy who threw that potato will stand up or raise his right hand I'll be—I'll be dabbled if I don't stop speaking long enough to come down and lick the hair and hide off of him in two minutes by the clock." As no body rose or raised a hand the colonel resumed his broken remarks, but declares that he never came as near cursing since he joined the church.

This thing of cursing is of very ancient origin. Sometimes it was done by proxy. Balak, the king of Moab, hired Balaam to curse Israel and some of us veterans remember when we, too, wanted to hire a cusin man to expend our wrath upon the yankees. Peter cursed and swore when accused of being one of the disciples. It is probable that he said "I'll be damned if I am, or perhaps worse. Soldiers and sailors have in all ages been profane—the very class that are in greatest peril and should have the greatest reverence for their maker. Uncle Toby says, "Our army swore terribly in Flanders." And Uncle Toby himself swore an oath when he found the sick soldier lying and dying at his gate. "He shall not die, by God," he said, and the accusing spirit flew up to heaven with the oath and blushed as he gave it in.

The recording angel as he wrote it down dropped a tear upon the word and blotted it out forever." That is beautiful, isn't it? Verily, charity hideth a multitude of sins.

But this is enough on this subject. It is too hot to work in the garden and so I get in the shade of the vines on my veranda and ruminate. Judge Griggs, our honored member of congress, tells that story on Colonel Livingston, and he told another that will make the old men forget that it is hot, for they never get too old to enjoy any story that has a pretty woman in it. One of the last cases brought before the judge was a young unsophisticated country boy who was charged with an assault upon a bonnie country girl in that he had caught her at the spring and hogged and kissed her against her will. Her mother saw it from her piazza and heard her scream and saw him run away to the field where he was plowing. She was very indignant, and prosecuted him. She was the witness and so was the girl, but the girl did not seem very vindictive. She said he didn't hurt her but took her by surprise. She had filled her bucket and was about to go back when he caught her and hugged her and kissed her right on her mouth. The solicitor closed his case.

The young man was put up to make his statement, and all he said was that she looked so sweet and pretty he couldn't help it, and he didn't believe that Miss Molly was very mad about it now, for she went off singing of a hymn. "What hymn was she singing?" asked the judge. "I don't know," he said. "What hymn were you singing Miss Molly?" asked the judge. She smiled and said it was "The Lord Will Provide." The judge charged the jury very mildly, and told them that an assault implied malice, etc., but as the jury couldn't see where the malice came in, they came back with this verdict: "We the jury, find the defendant not guilty, as there was no malice or hate in it, and we recommend him to the mercy of the court."

This story reminds me of John Riley's verdict in the Pass case. Good old John Riley, the foreman of the Rome Courier's press room for years and years, and the foreman of the jury in the case of the State against Romulus Pass for hog stealing. Pass had been suspected of killing Wallis Warren's shoats as they ran in the woods, and so Wallis laid for him, and one evening about dusk, when he heard a rifle shot, he slipped up and caught Pass in the very act of putting the shoat in a sack. Wallis didn't go to the war and managed to save his stock. Pass went, and left his wife and three little children to the mercy of God and the community. When he returned he found there was nothing left to live on, and one of the children had died. Judge Wright volunteered to defend him, and introduced no evidence, but had the last speech.

I will never forget the tender pathos of that speech—his picture of a poor soldier returning home to find desolation and despair. He never alluded to the evidence, but had the jury and the court in tears. The judge charged them as fairly as he could, and they retired. In a brief time they came in with this verdict: "Whereas, the late, unhappy war reduced many of our brave soldiers and their families to want and poverty by reason of which they were forced at times to wander in the woods for such game as they could find in order to keep the wolf from the door and their little ones from starvation; therefore, we, the jury, find the defendant not guilty, John Riley, foreman." "By gracious!" said Wallis, "they found Pass guilty and then pardoned him." Judge Wright never lost a case where he had the last speech and a woman or a poor man was his client.

But it is getting a little cooler now as the sun rises the horizon. I must stop and turn the water loose on my garden. The city has no water meters yet, but I can steal water with impunity, but as the nigger preacher said to his flock, "You musn't be caught stealin' chickens—cotched, I say."

Pointed Paragraphs.

It's easier to put up with extravagance than to put up for it. The distance that lends enchantment is not distance of manner. The letter B is always in debt, though there's no necessity for it. A man is bound to have more warm friends in summer than in winter.

Temporary insanity, induced by heat, led F. A. Conkey to kill John Bryant and his son at Albany, Mo., Saturday.

Several persons were seriously injured in a collision between a locomotive and a trolley car at Buffalo, N. Y., Tuesday.

By the overturning of a boat, James Reagan and William Walker were drowned in the Harlem River at New York, Sunday.

Fire at Wilbur, Wash., Saturday night, destroyed the principal business district of the town, entailing a loss of about $175,000.

Four men were fatally hurt and three others seriously injured by a gas explosion in a shaft of the new water-works at Torrence Road, near Cincinnati, O., Friday.

A gang of outlaws held up a train on the Great Northern near Wagner, Mont., Tuesday afternoon. The express safe was blown open and $45,000 in currency was taken therefrom.

By the derailment of the engine tender of a Iowa Central passenger train at Hampton, Ia., Thursday night, two railway mail agents were killed and two men severely injured. The passenger coaches remained on the track.

The town of Williams, in Arizona, was practically destroyed by fire Tuesday. The loss is estimated at $500,000. Williams is a railway and lumbering town on the Santa Fe Railway and has a population of about 2,000.

At Albany, N. Y., Thursday, Raymond Albers, aged 13, shot and killed Emanuel Koehler, aged 12, and then hanged himself. The boys were playmates and according to statements of neighbors they had quarrelled some days ago.

A bolt of lightning instantly killed three men, fatally injured a boy and seriously injured a man and a boy, members of a St. Louis, Mo., fishing party who had sought refuge from a fierce storm beneath the shelter of a massive sycamore tree, Monday.

A severe wind-storm swept over Grand Island, Neb., Friday afternoon, doing immense damage. Gentry's circus was totally wrecked and many of the ponies were killed. A cage of monkeys was blown two miles and all the inmates were killed.

While a gang of negro laborers were engaged in tearing down the old Baptist church in Portsmouth, Va., Saturday, the walls gave way and buried five of the number beneath a pile of bricks and rafters. All were badly injured and two are expected to die.

A terrific hail-storm and cloud-burst passed over a portion of Quitman county, Ga., Saturday noon. The storm covered an area of four miles and swept the farms in its path. Mill dams were washed away, fences demolished and lowlands submerged. Farmers will be forced to plant over or relinquish their crops.

Foreign Affairs.
The new British naval program provides for building 19 ships. A state of siege has been proclaimed at Buenos Ayres, Argentina. Kurds are plundering Armenian villages and have killed 14 persons. Korea has requested the Japanese Government to withdraw its post-offices from Korea.

Differences between Great Britain and Russia continue to delay a settlement of the Chinese indemnity. Reports from Cuba show that the destruction of mosquitoes with oil has almost driven yellow fever from Havana.

Statistics relative to the consumption of tea show that the use of the beverage in Europe has increased 40 per cent in years.

Boers wrecked a train near Naampspruit, Transvaal, Monday, killing 18. Lord Kitchener reports the capture of 93 Boers.

Last Week in Trade Circles
Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, July 9, 1901. Intensely hot weather and the recurrence of the national holiday, (which in some departments has been protracted by two and three days suspension of business on the Exchanges) have considerably curtailed the volume of general trade during the past week. Labor disputes and the heat have lessened the industrial output in some departments, and hot winds and lack of moisture in some parts of the country have caused concern for the corn and cotton crops. But while conditions in some districts are critical, no serious damage has yet been done and more favorable weather may speedily avert threatened crop impairment. The great winter wheat harvest is rapidly approaching completion, and the favorable spring wheat outlook practically assures a record-breaking yield of the two varieties of this cereal. Aside from reasonable influences against active business the general situation is favorable, and with satisfactory agricultural results the vacation period is pretty certain to be succeeded by a fall season of great activity in all branches of trade.

Crop uncertainties and speculation covering before the holiday caused an advance of 1/16 of a cent in cotton prices, but there has been very little activity in the trade. Crop advances are conflicting, and the fact that the Government estimate of a condition of 81.1 per cent, was based upon data to June 25th instead of July 1st, has left traders in considerable doubt as to the actual general average condition of the crop, but with the exception of that of last year it is known to be lower than in any recent year. The cotton goods trade has been quieter as a consequence of hot weather and the general holiday, but values have been well maintained. Supplies of desirable lines of cotton goods have been well cleaned up, and some makers have their production sold ahead for several months. This condition of stocks and contracts encourages a higher holding of goods to be made, but the advanced asking rates restrict new business both for domestic uses and for export. The wool trade has been fair, but not active.

Corn prices have advanced 3/4 cent per bushel. Speculation for higher prices has been stimulated by apprehension about the growing crop which has been caused by the dry, hot weather in Kansas, Southern Missouri and other parts of the Southwest. There is no reliable evidence that serious injury has yet been done, but as a considerable percentage of the crop is in a critical condition from lack of sufficient moisture the speculators have taken advantage of the situation to push up prices. The interior movement of corn is light, which fact indicates either small reserves or a reluctance on the part of farmers to part with their present holdings while the crop outlook shall remain so uncertain. Foreign demand for corn is very fair. Values of hog products have tended downward as a result of fairly liberal receipts and realizations by speculative holders. Domestic trade in provisions has been fairly active, but exports fell a little short of the shipments for the corresponding week last year.

Summertime in Billyville.
Quite a party from here will go to the seaside next week and go in washing. Our coroner weighs 350 pounds, and when he sits on a man there's no hope on earth for him. Two of our town poets have had their heads shaved close to where their brains ought to be. We have given our pastor three months' vacation, as he preached too much hell for hot weather. It is so hot in this settlement we could broil beefsteak in the sun—if we only had any steak to broil.

Two Fatalities at Asheville.
Asheville, N. C., July 8.—Two shocking fatalities occurred here late this afternoon. James Cooper, the young son of Mrs. Hannah Cooper, of this city, was killed while attempting to board an incoming passenger train on the Murphy branch of the Southern. He was employed by the transfer company and wanted to check some baggage on the train. His foot slipped from the car platform, and his body dragged fifty feet. He lived only a few minutes.

While Francis Hill and little son were bathing in the French Broad river, near the old depot, the boy was drowned. The father had gone a short distance to look at a fish line and when he returned he found that his son had fallen in deep water, where he sank.

Burglars carried off goods by the wagon load from Baird Brothers' grocery store in this city last night. The robbers got in by boring a hole in the rear window and knocking out a stick that held the window down. The loss is one of the heaviest of the kind that has been sustained here in years.

No Crime to Kiss.
Columbia, S. C., July 9.—For the first time in the history of South Carolina criminal courts, a man has been prosecuted for kissing a pretty maid. The offender was C. C. Hopper, an official of the Clifton Manufacturing Company of Spartanburg, the victim Miss Maggie Cudd, age 16, buxom and pretty. Hopper is a married man and there was great interest in the trial. There was no doubt of the kiss. Miss Cudd convinced the jury. The indictment read "assault and battery of a high and aggravated nature." The jury did not think the kissing a penitentiary offence, and after hanging four hours found Hopper not guilty.

ALL OVER THE STATE.
A Summary of Recent Events for the Past Ten Days.

Mrs. Josephine Hine, of Forsyth county, was gored by a cow Wednesday and fatally injured.

Gladden Flourney, a young law student, was drowned in a pond near Reidsville, Tuesday, while fishing.

A negro found prowling about the premises of T. L. West, at Dover, Saturday night, was shot dead by the owner.

The eight-year-old son of Evander Johnson, in Cumberland county, was drowned in the Cape Fear river Monday while taking a swim.

The State Firemen's Tournament will be held at Charlotte, beginning July 23rd and lasting for three days. The attendance promises to be large.

John Cutchin, of Edgecombe county, while on his way home from Tarboro in an intoxicated condition Saturday night, fell from his cart and was killed.

Mary Miller, a colored woman of Gastonia, while under the influence of chloroform, died suddenly in Dr. E. F. Glenn's dental chair Tuesday afternoon.

The 16-year-old daughter of Hugh Green, of Morrisville, Wake county, while starting a fire with kerosene oil Monday evening, was fatally burned by the can exploding.

Because Thomas Moser, a Winston street car conductor, put a negro off the car Friday afternoon for bad conduct, he was attacked by a colored mob later on and beaten unmercifully. Several arrests have been made.

Jack Sears, a white man, Friday, on his farm about twelve miles from Scotland Neck, between that place and Enfield, was killed by a negro named Berry. They had some difficulty out in the field, when the negro with his hoe split Mr. Sears' head open.

Jim Bailey, a negro about 20 years old, was lynched in Johnston county, Tuesday night, for criminally assaulting that afternoon the 13-year-old daughter of John W. Strickland, who lives six miles from Smithfield. The negro was on his way to jail when a masked mob took him in charge.

R. McK. Rozier, who lives about five miles from Lumberton, has been married for thirty years and has eight strong healthy children. No member of his family uses tobacco or stimulants of any kind, and he states that for the thirty years he has been married he has had only one professional visit from the doctor.

According to the Mt. Airy News, Uncle Sam Key, who lives between Siler and Rockford on the Yadkin river, is, no doubt, the oldest inhabitant in North Carolina, and perhaps the oldest person in the South. He was 103 years old on his last birthday. He is in good health and as active and lively as scores of men 30 years younger.

The Monroe Enquirer says: Mrs. J. I. Richardson, of Buford township, and Mrs. Josiah Helms, of Vance township, are sisters, and, although they do not live more than twenty-five miles apart, they had not, until last Monday, when they met here in the court house, seen each other since the close of the civil war. The sisters had to be introduced as they did not recognize each other.

Father and Sons Compose a Ball Nine.
The Raleigh Times calls attention to the most remarkable baseball team in the State. They are the Cary Red Shirts and every member of the team is a son of Mr. Jim Jones, except one, the captain, and Mr. Jones fills that place himself. Mr. Jones is the father of 23 children, 18 of them boys, so he has enough material to select a crack nine from and does not use the same pitcher every day. Mr. Jones captains the team and plays second base, while the youngest player is short stop.

Baby Born With Needle In Stomach.
Newark, N. J., July 8.—A needle was found by Roentgen rays on Saturday evening in the stomach of Mary Lang, 15 months old, who has cried almost all the time since her birth and shown indications of pain in the stomach. She was taken to St. James Hospital in Newark from her home at 123 Adams street, and the hospital physicians sent her to Dr. Frank Devlin, who has a Roentgen ray apparatus. He discovered a dark line, and by careful manipulation of the flesh brought a needle to the surface and extracted it with tweezers without making an incision. He was of the opinion that the needle was in the child before its birth and cited a similar case of the Dolan baby of Plainfield, from whose stomach a needle was extracted a few days ago. The needle taken from the Lang baby was blackened, but intact.

Catarrh
Is a constitutional disease. It originates in a scrofulous condition of the blood and depends on that condition. It often causes headache and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, affects the vocal organs, disturbs the stomach. It is always radically and permanently cured by the blood-purifying, alterative and tonic action of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
The great medicine has wrought the most wonderful cures of all diseases depending on scrofula or the scrofulous habit. Hood's Pills are the best cathartic.
