A Dream of Life's Springtime

on came, dear, in the Springtime, with

You came, dear, in the Springtime, with all its balm and bloom;
A rainbow arched the tempest, a star smiled in the gloom;
And, Oh, the days, the weary ways with thorns so keen to kill.
But evermore that whispered word:
"Dear heart, I love you still."

You came, dear, in the Springtime, and all the roses seemed Far sweeter for the thought of you, as You came, the Springtime promise in beauty to fulfil,

With evermore that whispered word:
"Dear heart, I love you still?" Oh, vision of life's Springtime, where all Love's mem'ries eling. How sad we drift to winter who once have known the spring?
