Life's Scars.

They say the world is round, and yet I often think it square; So many little hurts we get From corners here and there. But one great truth in life I've found. While journeying to the west. The only folks who really wound Are those we love the best.

WHEN STARS FELL.

Bill Arp tells of the Shower of the Leonids in 1833. Shakespeare tells of man's seven ages, but his seven does not fit our day—nor, indeed, did they fit his own day with any distinct lines of demarcation between them. They glide into each other and it is hard to tell where the one quits and the other begins. We have infants and school boys and lovers, but very few are soldiers, and not one in a hundred ever becomes a justice of the peace. His sixth age does not do justice to our men and women of three score years and ten, for most of them grow fat instead of lean, and our big manly voices have not turned to treble, nor do they pipe and whistle in their sound. I can still sing base to the long-meter doxology and my wife can sing "Mary had a little lamb" to the baby. As to the seventh age, which he pictures as second childhood and mere oblivion without teeth or taste or eyes or ears or anything, we never see them—our old people die before they get to that. But in the life of every man and woman there are epochs, events, milestones, as it were, that stand out prominent in memory and mark their progress from youth to old age.

Definite Purpose.

The aim of all men is success in life. They have many different ambitions, but all want to succeed in some way—in acquiring money, in obtaining social distinction or in winning fame and high place—and a few are content if they become good citizens and do their duty. Whatever their ambitions may be, it is essential to success that they should have a definite purpose and pursue it with an unchanging intent. Whatever their ambitions may be, it is essential to success that they should have a definite purpose and pursue it with an unchanging intent. When a sailing vessel is bound to port against a head wind its captain is obliged to tack in order to maintain his onward course. He sometimes appears to the novice to be sailing away from his destination, but he is only going about to get a long reach for his goal. He does not sail this way and that in blind confidence that after a time he may strike a favoring breeze that will carry him to his destination, but he tacks with a purpose, and that purpose is to control the wind that opposes him and make it subservient to his will.

Wonderful Montana Cave.

A new and wonderful natural cave, believed to be one of the largest known, has just been discovered in the canon of the Jefferson, on the line of the Northern Pacific Railway about 50 miles east of Butte. A partial exploration of it has been made by a small party. Several days were spent in the cave and explorations made covering an extent of 10 miles or more to a depth of nearly 1,000 feet. A large river with a current of about 100 feet was explored for a distance of several miles without discovering its source or outlet.

William J. Exton, aged 52 years, an employe of the Edgemore Bridge Works, at Wilmington, Del., while going to work Monday morning was struck by a locomotive. His skull was fractured, one leg mangled and he was taken to the Delaware Hospital in a serious condition.

Levi Garret, a young French Canadian, of Rumford Falls, Me., is in a critical condition as the result of knife wounds received at the hands of highwaymen Saturday night. They secured $150 which Garret had drawn from the bank to defray the expenses of his wedding, which was to have taken place Sunday.

Mrs. Lindley C. Kent, aged 46 years, of Wilmington, Del., wife of a prominent business man, Monday morning locked herself in the bathroom and cut the arteries in both wrists. Then she filled the bathtub half full of water and got into it to drown. Next she took a pillow and held it to her face, and suffocated.

While she was at work in the York Silk Mills at York, Pa., Friday, Miss Daisy Stees' hair was caught in a belt. With rare presence of mind Miss Jessie Jacoby, an intimate friend of Miss Stees, grasped the belt. The excitement of the moment gave Miss Jacoby such strength that she succeeded in throwing the belt and thus stopping the machinery.

While mixing vitriol and other chemicals in a vat at the works of the Eddystone Manufacturing Company, of Chester, Pa., Monday, James Cassidy fell into the vat and was badly burned. The acids ate away his clothing before workmen could pull him out of the partly filled receptacle. It is feared that he will lose his sight, but it is believed that his life can be saved.

Six masked men broke into the Northern Central Railroad office at New Freedom, Pa., Monday night, and made an ineffectual attempt to blow open the safe. Charles Shaeffer, a Northern Central engineer, discovered the men at work, and four of them attacked him. Shaeffer knocked one of his assailants down, and a hand-to-hand fight ensued. Shaeffer was overpowered, robbed of his watch and money and the men escaped.

ALL OVER THE STATE.

A Summary of Current Events for the Past Seven Days.

The Continental Furniture Company, with a capital of $25,000, has been organized in High Point.

On Friday morning the entire plant of the Riverview Knitting Mills at Tarboro were destroyed by fire. The loss is $50,000, insurance $35,000. The entire spring stock was destroyed and nearly 100 operatives thrown out of employment. The tenement houses were saved by great exertion.

On Tuesday night near Mazonia one Bill Dancy assaulted W. L. Poston with a piece of scuffling and in defense Poston struck Dancy on the head with a jug, cutting a gash on the forehead several inches long and shattering the jug. Blood and whiskey flowed freely.

It is stated there was a big fire at Troy Monday. It destroyed the principal hotel of the town and a half dozen or more other buildings. The cause of the fire was due to some coals rolling out on the floor after the occupants of a room had retired for the night.

I. Britt, the keeper of Robeson county's chaingang, was accidentally killed Monday, near Red Springs. Mr. Britt was standing with his back to the fire resting on his gun and the fire heated the gun, causing it to discharge. The shot took effect in the back and ranged upward. He lived four hours after the accident.

The gin house, together with its contents, consisting of a gin condenser and feeder and about ninety bushels of cotton seeds, of W. B. Sellers, of Morven, was destroyed by fire Thursday night. The house was situated on Mr. Sellers' Sneedsboro place, about four miles from the place of his residence. The gin had not been run for a week and there is no doubt but the fire was the work of an incendiary. Mr. Sellers estimates his loss at $750; insurance, $390.

What appears to have been a very dastardly attempt to fire the town of Rockingham was discovered Saturday night in time to prevent any damage. A colored man passing discovered a small flame of fire on the steps leading to Everett's hall. He beat it out with his hat and threw dirt on it. An examination showed that kerosene oil had been poured on the steps. A vigilant watch is being kept to prevent the repetition of such an occurrence.

Garfield Covington, a young colored man, was badly injured by an accidental discharge of his gun while out rabbit hunting. He had the gun cocked and as he was jumping over a log something caught the trigger and discharged the load into his knee. About 200 shot were taken out of his leg, but there is a great hole in his knee. It is thought probable that his leg will have to be taken off.

Vard Helms, 45 years old, who lived near Cherryville, Gaston county, was burned to death Monday morning. He was drunk and asked a passing friend to build him a fire in his house (he being in bed). The man built the fire and left. About an hour afterwards he returned and found Helms about 200 yards from his house burned beyond recognition. All his clothing was burned off except a thread or two around the waist. He leaves a wife and several children.

Uriah Robertson, who lives about two miles east of Monroe, was fatally shot Sunday night at his home. E. W. Roberts did the shooting. The ball entered the left side, passed through the abdominal cavity and lodged in the back. The wound was seen to be serious from the first and Mr. Roberts surrendered himself and is now in jail. He claims that he did the shooting in self-defense, that Robertson was assaulting him with a bottle and a chair. He bears an ugly wound in his forehead as proof of this.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't eat and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. H. HICKMAN, Webster, Pa.
