It does begin to look like cotton would go to fifteen cents, considering weather conditions and the fact that we Southerners need the money.

A BURDEN ON THE WOMEN.

The United States Senate has apparently determined to make the women of the country bear the chief burden of the tariff increase. The latest effort is shown in the successful attempt of Mr. Aldrich to raise the tariff on laces and embroideries from the present rate of 60 per cent, which is the highest that has ever been imposed under our laws, to a rate varying from 70 to 150 per cent. This latter rate falls upon the very cheapest laces imported, laces that in the European markets sell at less than two cents per dozen yards.

The increased duties are not confined, however, to laces, but are imposed equally upon all articles of which laces form even the most insignificant part, and women's undergarments, which are not merely necessities, but part of the decencies of life, will thus be compelled to bear this additional burden.

The Senate classes laces as luxuries, and quite possibly the handmade laces with which the families of the senators are familiar may be classed as such, but the cheapest grades of laces and embroideries, which the poorest of the poor feel the necessity of using, hardly belong to that category.

The plea that an additional protection is required by domestic manufacturers could hardly be put forward with a straight face. Marshall Field & Co., who own one of the largest lace manufacturing plants in this country at Zion City, Ill., in a letter under date of May 12 to the "Lace and Embroidery Review" state: "The industry is now fully protected, or rather, over-protected."

The method by which the proposed increase was passed in the Senate is not without significance. Paragraphs 345 and 346, covering the duties on laces and embroideries, had twice before the Senate for consideration and had twice passed that body sitting in committee of the whole, without any attempt to change the rate which had been fixed at 60 per cent by the House, being the same as the Dingley rate.

Friday, June 25, after the introduction by the finance committee of the bill to tax corporation incomes, and while that matter was engaging the attention of the Senate almost exclusively, and just as the Senate was about to adjourn, Mr. Aldrich offered an amendment to be known as paragraph 345 1-2, for the sole purpose, as he stated, of having it printed for consideration, which increased the duty on laces and other products of the Levers or Gotherg machine. At his request the paragraph was printed without being read.

Saturday, June 26, Mr. Aldrich offered a very different amendment, although numbered the same, which, in answer to the question of Mr. Bacon, Mr. Aldrich stated had been printed, a statement which was manifestly misleading. This amendment differed from that offered the previous day by adding not only embroideries, but also including nearly all machine made laces. He stated in explanation that the amendment put specific or compound duties upon certain classes of laces; that it covered only laces made by machine and did not cover handmade laces at all. In the brief statement made by the chairman of the finance committee, the fact that the amendment included embroideries remained undisclosed, and without debate the amendment in that shape was adopted by the Senate. Sandwiched between the consideration of paragraph 131, this amendment covering, according to the statement of Senator Aldrich, importations valued at $20,000,000 a year, was adopted apparently without consideration.

As a matter of fact the duty paid upon the importation of laces and embroideries during the year 1907 amounted to nearly $30,000,000, the volume of imports being almost $50,000,000. The proposed duty is only specific upon laces costing less than five cents a dozen yards, on which it ranges from 70 per cent, the same rate as imposed upon the highest class of machine-made laces, up to 150 per cent, the duty being higher as the cost of the lace diminishes.

The mysterious working of the finance committee in regard to these articles is further shown by the ignorance of some of the most prominent members of that committee regarding the contemplated increase. For instance as recently as June 11, Senator Lodge wrote: "The lace paragraph has been agreed to in both Senate and House, and will not be changed. The old law remains." Other members of the finance committee have stated that as far as they knew it was the intention of that committee to retain the Dingley rates.

Thus the Senate is endeavoring for the sake of a few over-protected manufacturers to lay an increased burden upon the women of the land, which on laces and embroideries alone in a prosperous year would amount to more than $5,000,000 above the $39,000,000 which they have hitherto been paying as a tribute to the domestic manufacturer.
