When the Panama canal bill was reported by the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, the House immediately resolved itself into the committee of the whole for its consideration. Its author, Representative Mann, of Illinois, explained its provisions, after which general depate was begun.

The abolishment of the Isthmian Canal Commission and the centralization of responsibility and autohrity for the construction of the canal zone under the President, in a directorgeneral, were bitterly opposed by several representatives. It was contended that Congress had no power to delegate legislative or judicial authority to the President and Representative Harrison, of New York, charged that President Roosevelt had assumed the ole of "dictator" and urged authority on the canal zone he did not possess.

Representative Olmstead, of Pennsylvania, rushed to the ex-President with a defense and insisted that Mr. Roosevelt had not exceeded his authority. Mr. Mann also declared that in acts of Congress and in the treaty between the United States and Panama could be found justification for

Mr. Roosevelt's actions.
